Jimmy Carter's Words About Future Optimistic

©The New York Times

By JAMES RESTON

Washington — Jimmy Carter came to Washington Wednesday for a little skull-practice with his presidential campaign staff, and talked optimistically and philosophically about the future.

In an interview with The New York Times, the Democratic Party's presidential nominee made the following points:

—He thought the Republicans would nominate President Ford at Kansas City, but not John B. Connally of Texas for vice president. On the issue of public trust, he said, "Maybe the only person in the country who has a lower rating in the polls than Connally is Gov. George Wallace."

—He thought the "religious" issue had been "substantially alleviated," but that trust in government and government leaders was still the major issue among the people, who he said were giving government "one more chance."

—He thought it was "fair" to talk about the "Ford-Nixon administration" — not, he said, "the dishonesty and the disgrace of Nixon, but Ford's continuation of Nixon's policies, yes."

—He was not assuming that he would win in November, or anything else, but if he won, he would revive "Cabinet government," restore "the fireside chats" of the Roosevelt era, work for a nonpartisan foreign policy, and try to renew the people's faith in their political leaders.

Carter acts like a man who has time for everybody. He was up greeting a delegation of milk producers at his hotel before 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. He addressed the Democratic Party's National Steering Committee shortly after 9, met editors of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain in midmorning, and had lunch with the editorial board of The Washington Star.

Later, he took questions from the editorial board of U.S. News and World Report, attended a fund-raiser for Tom Maloney, the Democratic senatorial candidate from Delaware, and spent the evening with the Democratic Study Group, before flying back to Georgia.

Awkward questions don't seem to bother him. In The New York Times interview, he was asked why he had begun attacking the Republicans on Tuesday in New Hampshire, and tying President Ford to Richard Nixon.

Well, he said, maybe it was a tactical mistake. He had carefully prepared a speech on the importance of the American family, but in the enthusiasm generaged by a party rally he had put it aside and made a scalding attack on the Republicans. Even so, he added, it was right to warn the Democrats against overconfidence and to attack Ford.

Ford was no Nixon, he said, but adding, "I don't see any change in Ford's attitude toward government, or his lack of leadership in transportation, public welfare, the Post Office or agriculture. Ford is such a weak leader — in my opinion, he has been just a quiescent extension of the policies of Nixon."

When Carter was asked about the controversy among Jews about his religion, he replied that he had tried to answer their doubts, and suggested that maybe in the process leaders of the Jewish community "have learned a little more about Southern Baptists."

"If there's one thesis within our church," he said, "it's the separation of church and state. Another thing: We believe in what we call 'the sainthood of the believer,' that each worshiper has a direct relationship to God, and the pastor of a church has no right to interfere in that relationship. Also, each Baptist church is autonomous. There's no hierarchical arrangement whereby the church can send down a dictum."

Carter said he thought people were curious about his religion rather than critical. "There's a lack of personal security in the country now, I think," he said, "and maybe a feeling that the few precious things that were never supposed to change have gone.

"When I came along, our families were stable. You knew where your mother and father were. There was a stability that was very reassuring. Where I lived, the church and school were always there. My father went to the same school I went to, and my kids have also gone to the same school. And later, though I moved every five years or so, my nation had characteristics that made me proud.

"Then along came Vietnam and Watergate, and the CIA revelations, and again there was something precious that was lost. Now people just want me to say why I believe in something. I had to face that question fairly early in the campaign. I talked it over with my wife and we decided it was wrong to conceal the way I believed. If they asked me, I'd just tell them."

Carter said he thought there was now a revival of optimism in the nation, but it should not be overestimated. "In many ways," he said, "there's an attitude — maybe it's an oversimplification — but people seem to be saying they're going to give government one more chance.

"And," he added, "if there should be any more lying, or scandal, or betrayal of trust on my part or the part of other leaders, it would be a devastating blow. Because our people have been so desperately hurt. I think they've been searching for a way to give up their own little selfish interest for the common good of the nation, and I think this was demonstrated in a little way at the Democratic convention."

Two Defendants Plead Innocent

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Two defendants pleaded innocent Wednesday to the kidnaping of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver. They were held in lieu of $1 million bail each. A third defendant lost a bid for reduction of his $1 million bail.

As a crowd of 250 persons gathered, a heavily armed team of Madera County sheriff's deputies manned rooftops around this farming town's new government building during the 45-minute arraigment of Frederick N. Woods and James Schoenfeld.

The two, 24-year-old sons of prominent San Francisco area families, appeared somber as they were formally charged with 43 counts of kidnaping and robbery in the July 15 abduction of the children and bus driver Ed Ray.

With them at the defense table was Schoenfeld's 22-year-old brother, Richard, who was arraigned last week on the same charges. All three were handcuffed.

"I want to make you aware that the first count of kidnaping of Frank Edward Ray carries with it a penalty of life imprisonment without parole because he suffered bodily harm," Justice Court Judge Howard C. Green told Woods and the older Schoenfeld.

Woods, wearing an ill-fitting navy blue suit, licked his lips nervously and looked down. Schoenfeld, wearing a striped shirt and corduroy pants, shuffled his feet and stared at the defense table.

The first count carries a more extreme penalty under state law because Ray's hand was cut as he and the children were herded by three gunmen into a buried moving van at a Livermore rock quarry.

The 55-year-old driver sat impassively in the front row of the 60-seat courtroom, filled to capacity with reporters and townspeople. Many of them waited three hours for a place.

After the defendants waived their right to a preliminary hearing within 10 days of arraignment, Green scheduled an Aug. 26 preliminary hearing for all three. He ordered Woods and James Schoenfeld held on $1 million bail each, the amount set earlier for Richard Schoenfeld.

"Do you understand the punishment if convicted?" Green asked the two.

"Yes," each replied.

Woods and James Schoenfeld waived their right to a complete reading of the 18-page complaint which details 27 kidnaping charges and 16 robbery charges. The robbery charges stem from the taking of personal articles from the captives.

Green also refused a request that the younger Schoenfeld's bail be reduced to $50,000. "Taking into consideration the seriousness of the charges, the bail will remain at $1 million," he declared.

'Sunset' Bill Receives Committee Approval

©The New York Times

Washington — The Senate Government Operations Committee Wednesday approved legislation, applying to Congress, that would end nearly all government spending programs unless each was specifically approved again over a five-year review cycle.

Known as the "sunset" bill, it is the legislative counterpart of the "zero-based budgeting" concept advocated for the executive branch of government by Jimmy Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee.

If enacted, the bill would amount to a revolution in congressional procedures almost comparable to the budget reform act that is in full operation this year for the first time. That reform requires Congress to set, and live within, over-all spending ceilings each year.

Enactment of the "sunset" bill by both houses of Congress this year is regarded by congressional staff exports as doubtful but not impossible. Hearings on companion legislation in the House have been conducted by both the Rules Committee and the new Budget Committee.

The bill approved Wednesday would exempt from the automatic termination, or "sunset," process only a few insurance-type programs, such as Social Security, in which individuals contribute to a retirement program or other benefit.

Thus, even long-standing "entitlement" programs such as veterans' combat-related disability benefits would be subject to review every five years, though there is little expectation that cash payments now received by individuals would be taken away.

More likely to be modified or possibly terminated are some of the more than 1,000 government grant programs, often through state and local governments, that deliver services of various kinds.

The committee report on the bill will begin as follows:

"The purpose of S.2925, as amended, is to close the gap between Congress and the results of its legislative work — the actual performance and accomplishments of federal programs paid for out of the federal budget."

The bill sets up a schedule of "functional" programs—health, education, income security, veterans, agriculture and natural resources — for review and possible termination every five years. Under an amendment adopted Wednesday the reform itself would have to be re-enacted by Congress after five years of experience.

The bill must now be considered by the Senate Rules Committee. It also must be considered by the Finance Committee because one of its provisions requires a five-year review cycle of "tax expenditures" — that is, special tax deductions, exemptions or exclusions aimed at achieving results in such areas as mining and health or home-ownership outlays by taxpayers.

The chief sponsor of the legislation was Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee that drafted the bill. Muskie's perception of the need for the "sunset" measure grew as a result of his other role as chairman of the new Senate Budget Committee.

The committees that handle the basic legislation would conduct the reviews, with help from the Office of Management and Budget, the General Accounting Office and the new Congressional Budget Office.

It was enough to make a Sioux nostalgic. Bison were once again wandering the rolling hills north of Lincoln.

Showing as little concern for fences as for the gnats buzzing around their huge, wooly forms, the herd of 20 to 25 roamed free at least six hours Wednesday.

For the past two years the buffalo had been maintaining the pretenses that they were being contained by a fence on the George Eager farm about five miles north of Lincoln.

But when someone left a gate open ... that was too much for the majestic creatures to endure and they took to the open prairie.

The herd, including female buffalo and their small calves, browsed mainly through the succulent milo fields.

Roaming At Will

"They roam at will," said Deputy Roy Ostrander gloomily from the radio dispatching room from which he was monitoring reports from deputies on the scene.

The deputies were wary at first, alarmed by information from the Game and Parks Commission that "you can't herd them like cattle."

"Either they'll charge you or they'll run the other way and tromp down whatever gets in their path." Ostrander said he was told.

The sheriff's office includes one deputy, Glenn Lyman, that had some experience with bison when he lived near a government bison sanctuary in Montana.

But Lyman was not at the scene. "I'm not going out there. I'm not going anywhere near," he said.

'They're Unpredictable'

"They'll charge people or cars or anything else. They're dangerous. They're unpredictable. A big bull can 'purt near upend an automobile."

As time passed, however, deputies at the scene became restless. And shortly after the sheriff's helicopter appeared in the air over the brown beasts, the spectacle began to seem like a rodeo.

A collection of farmers in pickups and on tractors lent their efforts and before long the number of people on the scene exceeded the number of buffalo.

Deputy Arvid Morgan even forsook his patrol car for a tractor. "Yahoo," he shouted as he roared past reporters, who, following their natures, were standing on the sidelines and jibing at the efforts of those they watched.

One farmer chased the lumbering beasts with a boat oar. Others waved their baseball-billed hats. The tractors and pickups followed along behind the animals, except when the animals decided otherwise.

The only thing for which the buffalo showed respect was the helicopter, which swooped and hovered with a huge clatter overhead.

At length, the buffalo gave way to the humans and returned to their fenced field, where they are being raised for commercial purposes, according to their owner.

The deputies, however, are worried that the buffalo may now have lost their respect for fences after ripping through at least three of them during their countryside excursion, which took them about three miles from home.

"No fence is going to hold them if they want to go," was Ostrander's grim prediction from the radio dispatch room.

UNL To Be Busy In Fall

By NANCY HICKS

Both the number of faculty and students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will probably climb this fall.

But the number of Lincoln campus administrators may decline.

Early registration for fall classes now stands at 17,044 students, the highest figure since 1971, according to Robert Reid, assistant to the dean of academic services.

Last August, the students who registered early totaled only 16,371, but the complete fall enrollment of 22,380 was the highest for the 1970 decade, Reid said.

Early registration is the best measure of student enrollment until after the August 30 start of classes, he said.

Total teaching faculty, which numbered about 1,100 full-time equivalent positions last year, will grow by about 31 full-time positions this fall.

The additional positions are the result of $850,000 plugged into the UNL budget by the Legislature. The money was specifically earmarked for improvement of undergraduate education.

Some of the new faculty hired with the money will be used to replace graduate teaching assistants and upgrade part-time positions. The rest will be used to hire about 36 new professors.

About 31 of the 36 new positions will be filled by the fall semester, said Dr. Alan Seagren, administrative assistant to the vice chancellor for program development and review.

Administrative numbers appear to be the only decrease at the UNL campus this fall. A $1 million cut from university budget resulted in the chopping of "several administrators" said Glen Sloan, administrative budget officer.

No new administrative positions have been added on the Lincoln campus this year and the only one in the works is a request for a new vice chancellor for research by new Chancellor Roy Young, said Sloan.

And most of the administrative positions that were vacant during the year — the chancellorship, deans for Law and Arts and Sciences Colleges, the vice chancellor of the Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources — have been filled, said Harry Allen, director of the institutional research and planning.

He could think of only two as yet unfilled positions — the graduate dean slot and the administrative assistant to the chancellor.

Total teaching faculty, which numbered about 1,100 full-time equivalent positions last year, will grow by about 31 full-time positions this fall.

The additional positions are the result of $850,000 plugged into the UNL budget by the Legislature. The money was specifically earmarked for improvement of undergraduate education.

Some of the new faculty hired with the money will be used to replace graduate teaching assistants and upgrade part-time positions. The rest will be used to hire about 36 new professors.

About 31 of the 36 new positions will be filled by the fall semester, said Dr. Alan Seagren, administrative assistant to the vice chancellor for program development and review.

Administrative numbers appear to be the only decrease at the UNL campus this fall. A $1 million cut from university budget resulted in the chopping of "several administrators" said Glen Sloan, administrative budget officer.

No new administrative positions have been added on the Lincoln campus this year and the only one in the works is a request for a new vice chancellor for research by new Chancellor Roy Young, said Sloan.

And most of the administrative positions that were vacant during the year — the chancellorship, deans for Law and Arts and Sciences Colleges, the vice chancellor of the Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources — have been filled, said Harry Allen, director of the institutional research and planning.

He could think of only two as yet unfilled positions — the graduate dean slot and the administrative assistant to the chancellor.

His Plants Are Green And Greedy

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — J. A. Mazrimas is a bit put out with people bad-mouthing his garden. After all, the plants are nice and green, and some are very colorful.

There's just one problem with his plants — they eat things.

The 36-year-old Lawrence Laboratory biochemist has a green thumb and a passion for carnivorous plants. Most eat flies and other insects, but one of the bigger specimens can gulp a gopher.

"These are often beautiful as well as helpful plants whose terrifying reputation is entirely unjust," said Mazrimas in an interview in his greenhouse.

Mazrimas, who edits the Carnivorous Plant Newsletter, gazed appreciatively at his leafy meat-eaters, the most common of which is the Venus flytrap. This plant has leaves built like a spring trap with teeth around the edges. It's common enough that it can be purchased in many plant shops for $3 or less.

The Australian sundew attracts its prey with a mat of tentacles adrip with a sticky substance to capture unsuspecting insects.

"It's all that activity, not so much the beauty, that attracts collectors," said Mazrimas.

As a further example, he pointed to the rare Aldrovanda, a floating, fernlike plant that does its thing in water.

"It's fast," Mazrimas said enthusiastically. "You should see how it closes in on things — even a toothpick."

Mazrimas feeds his specimens by simply opening the greenhouse door, noting there are plenty of flies and insects in Livermore. Some collectors, he noted, feed their plants cooked egg or hamburger.

AP

J.A. MAZRIMAS . . . doesn't like people bad-mouthing his plants.

He also has pitcher plants — passive traps — bearing tube-shaped leaves that act like pitfalls from which an insect cannot escape. The smaller ones can take on only tiny creatures, but the Nepenthes merrilliana of the Philippines can chomp rats and gophers.

Actually, they don't chomp, he said. All of the rooted carnivores decompose their prey with enzymes secreted by the plant or with the help of bacteria. There are some 500 species.

Mazrimas' practice of coddling and caring for his seedlings and seeds in the family refrigerator is not entirely appreciated by Kathy, his wife.

Making a face, she spoke of "all those things in the refrigerator, with the lettuce and everything — those hungry things."

Coal Leasing Bill Enacted

Washington (UPI) — The House Wednesday handed President Ford his 10th veto setback, voting to override his action to kill federal coal leasing reform legislation.

The 316-85 vote, and similar action in the Senate Tuesday, was a major victory for environmentalists who have been attempting for several years to update the 1920 federal coal leasing law.

The measure, which now becomes law, affects Western states the most where large reserves of coal lie beneath public lands.

Reps. Charles Thone and Virginia Smith, both R-Neb., voted in favor of overriding the veto, while Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., voted against.

The bill contains provisions aimed at preventing speculation.

They Had Lots Of Money

(c) Newhouse News Service

Newark, N.J. — In the good old days people had lots of money.

Much of it wasn't worth anything, but it was colorful and had many artistic pictures, and a wealthy person who decided to go shopping might have to bring along 25 to 30 different types of dollar bills, in all sizes, shapes and colors.

It is almost impossible to believe in this day when all currency is green and crisp and issued by the federal government, but until 1865, there was no such thing as a national U.S. currency.

So banks, cities, states, corporations — even individuals — issued their own currency, which was used by citizens more or less the same way Uncle Sam's green stuff is used today.

No limit was imposed on the number of notes which could be printed back in those days. So a dinky little bank with maybe $100 in assets could print up, in theory, $100 million in currency.

Such transactions often occurred. And banks often went broke. Indeed, the notes of bankrupt banks were called "broken bank notes."

"A lot of people got stung," says Dorothy Budd Bartle, curator of the Neward Museum's currency and coin collection.

"The merchants learned very quickly what currency was good."

The banks would vie with each other to print the most artistic currency. Most institutions wanted pictures that would inspire confidence. So likenesses of George Washington and the dour Henry Clay were common.

The notes also featured dogs and deer and children, and even what is now known as cheesecake. Sexy young women were considered moral subjects for money if they were dressed as Greek goddesses. Greek goddesses could get away with a great many things ordinary females couldn't.

One bank, for example, had money featuring two Greek goddesses in what was undoubtedly provocative dress of the time. They were sitting near a chest filled with money. On the chest was a sign that read, "Loans."

The older of the two goddesses is pointing to a train chugging across the countryside as she fondles the chest full of money to be loaned, as if to say, "Look at all the progress a loan will buy."

With so many bills around, counterfeit bills were common. One fake was discovered when it was noticed that the counterfeiter had misspelled the name of the bank.

Road Ceiling $7.2 Billion

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday approved and sent to the White House a $5.3 billion transportation appropriations bill for fiscal 1977 which puts a ceiling on highway construction projects.

The bill imposes a spending ceiling of $7.2 billion on highway building projects in fiscal 1977.

The administration had demanded a ceiling, which was originally rejected by the House and approved by the Senate.

The ceiling affects trust funds derived from user taxes which are used for highway building.

The appropriations measure includes $576 million for Amtrak, with $62.6 million of that earmarked for the Northeast.

Ex-Household Worker Wins Pay, Damages

Washington (AP) — The Labor Department has won its first suit filed against a private household employer for failing to pay the $2.20 federal minimum wage to a domestic worker, the government announced Wednesday.

Vigilante-Type Raid Touched Off By Fear

LOGAN, Ohio (AP) — The men were armed with shotguns as they surrounded what they thought was a burning cross at a campground in the sparsely populated county in the hills of southeastern Ohio.

Their vigilante-type raid, as the local newspaper and police have termed the activity, turned up a group of Lutherans holding a junior Olympics in the camp, snuggled in the hills near where Fivemile Creek empties into the muddy Hocking River southeast of here.

The fire was the campers' version of the Olympic torch.

The raid last Saturday came amid a climate of fear in Logan and Hocking County, where some residents are intent on catching what they believe is a group of people who move among the hills at night mutilating animals in strange religious observances.

It started in May when the police and sheriff's departments began receiving reports of mutilated animals. Those departments confirm that some mutilations have occurred but details remain sketchy. Local law enforcement agencies are keeping quiet, evidently to keep from spreading the wild-fire rumors even quicker Or so Logan Daily News editor Jim Myers speculates.

"I don't know if that's the right thing or not," Myers said. "The way the rumor has spread already, perhaps some facts would slow it down."

That rumor runs something like this

A group of men in black robes and hoods, the garb of an unknown religious sect, are mutilating animals as part of their ritual The police and sheriff there say they know of 10 cases of mutilation but have not linked those to any bizarre worship activities

They have received reports of the mutilations of two horses, a dog, chickens, a cow, a steer and four rabbits Police Chief James Thompson and Sheriff Paul Hartman both have said there are no reports of harm being done to humans.

A reporter for the Daily News says a police spokesman said he was in a patrol car dogging the "vigilantes" last Friday and that in stopping at rural homes to check the whereabouts of the armed men they were met at three successive doors by residents with shotguns

The Logan police, Hocking County sheriff and prosecuting attorney issued a statement to the county's 20,000 residents.

"It appears that the circulation of rumors concerning this alleged group has created a dangerous situation Within the last few days, residents of the county have been carrying firearms and other weapons in their cars supposedly for protection. Others have actually been taking vigilante type action . . . This activity has reached the point where it is endangering the lives and property of innocent persons," the report reads in part

The law enforcement agencies warn the vigilantes that the law will be enforced if they are caught carrying weapons illegally.

The statement also reminds residents that there is nothing illegal about "bizarre ceremonies or worship activities as long as the persons or property of other citizens is not endangered."

Growth Aims No Surprise

Lancaster County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said a theory is "within the scope of reasonableness" that monied and growth-oriented interests are trying to manipulate the formulation of a new Comprehensive Plan with regard to such growth-related areas as roadbuilding.

He also says there is a possibility of a "self-perpetuating alliance between the monied growth or development industry and the bureaucrats involved in areas related to growth."

Hamilton is being polite in suggesting that such theories about alliances and efforts to manipulate the planning processes are "within the scope of reasonableness."

Efforts among some private and public interests to effect policies which are good for business are natural and perpetual.

In Lincoln, the "monied, growth industry" has always had a voice, although sometimes it has not been as effective as at other times.

The thought that developers and roadbuilders and those with related interests would want to see a massive roadbuilding plan adopted by the city and county is about as surprising as the news that Nebraska has a politically conservative congressional delegation. That is to say, it is not surprising at all.

Nor is it surprising that advocates of growth would — make that will — try either (1) to have a Comprehensive Plan adopted which contains a more aggressive road program than the elected officials of the city and county and the people here have demonstrated they want or (2) to persuade the electorate to change the makeup of the City Council and the County Board so that roadbuilders and developers can achieve their goals unhindered by elected officials.

Just as there are those here who have a somewhat naive and elitist attitude, ignoring the legitimate needs of transportation and commerce and the obvious economic benefits which accrue from reasonable growth policies, so are there those who still pursue the postwar penchant for untrammeled growth for its own sake — the kind of policies which have helped to push this country into the economic problems and energy and environmental messes it finds itself in today.

People who care about the quality of life in Lincoln and the county will have to continue in seeing to it that so far as growth and development is concerned, the local governments stay on a moderate course.

In recent times people have spoken out at government road hearings and council and board meetings, they have spoken through their elected officials and at the polls about their feelings on roadbuilding, and we think, growth in general.

But it appears that they will have to keep speaking out.

The 'Most Conservative' State?

A national political newsletter, "Political Intelligence," has combined the ratings of the liberal Americans for Democratic Action and the conservative Americans for Constitutional Action to reach its own conclusion that Nebraska has the most politically conservative delegation in the U.S. Congress.

Does that mean that Nebraska is the most conservative state in the union?

If the members of the delegation are truly representative of their constituents, that is what it must mean.

There have been other indications in recent years of Nebraska's conservatism — one indication being the fact that voters here gave the Tricky One his highest victory percentage of any state in one election and almost the highest in another.

Of course, being designated the "most conservative" state does not square with Nebraska's progressive history and the days long ago when people here could be boastfully proud of some of their representatives in Washington. Nor does it square with the reality of a resurgent Democratic Party in the state and the possible re-emergence of moderate Republican leadership.

Nebraska's "most conservative" congressional delegation is not, in our opinion, totally representative of the political thinking here.

Of course, it will take some turnarounds at the polls to help prove our point.

So Westview has been black-balled out of use. How sad that it is considered unsafe to be lived in. I have been told that its outer walls are three feet thick, certainly sturdy. The room partitions, doors and wide stair from first to second floors are wood and plaster, but what building isn't?

The chapel is small but adequate for visiting ministers, and lively programs of music or readings. The spacious kitchen gave forth mouth-watering aromas of good food. All the rooms were kept orderly and clean. There were TV's for favorite programs, the freedom to walk down the road to where the mailbox held papers and letters for those living in the big white house.

Few nursing homes have the privilege of going outside. I have seen several and they were unbelievable, with men and women just sitting, mute, not even a magazine to look at. Westview had many good books to read. The bedfast were kept clean, and all the meals were regular.

It is refreshing to note that recent public statements by Gene Mahoney, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's new director, indicate a sensitivity and awareness to the overall outdoor recreational resource. Mr. Mahoney has not only indicated a continued commitment toward improved hunting and fishing resources, expansion and development of our park system, but has also indicated foresight in expanding recreational opportunities associated with the preservation of existing wildernesses such as hiking trails and camping areas.

I take my test in November. Although my hair has not changed color, my enthusiasm for tests has gone down.

The first time I took the test, I was so unnerved, had I been asked where the steering wheel was located, I would have said it protrudes diagonally from the trunk. Although I have passed each test, I can say I am enjoying them less.

How the heavenly blue morning glories do continue to grow. They have long overgrown the trellis. Now their tendrils reach out like some sly animal lying in wait to snare its victim. Since last week the vines have doubled in size, groping over the edge of the brick wall. I have removed them from the chairs we sit in during the cool of the evening and twined them back onto the trellis. The next morning they are back again curling around the arms, slithering along the seat or draping over the back.

If we remained in the chairs for a long period of time, they would trap us, holding us hostages in our own backyard. Fortunately morning glories are not meat-eaters like the Venus fly trap that catches its prey and devours it.

"I think it's time you did a little pruning on these vines," said the Farmer one night as we sat down. All the while he was attempting to extricate himself from the groping tendrils that swayed in the wind.

"Yes, tomorrow," I promised for the tenth time. Somehow when I go out to fulfill my promise, I see the many little flower buds along the vines and envision all the lovely sky-blue flowers in early morning, and stop short.

The green bugs are infesting the milo fields, some quite heavily. They have been flying the past few days, apparently into our area, since The Farmer reports none of those in our fields have left.

The bottom leaves have turned brown and the stems are running with sap. The milo is also beginning to head. If the weather would cool and if we would be favored with continued rainfall, The Farmer thinks the milo would come through the stress period. Spraying is an additional expense. Not only that but the time involved is an added problem. Then there are those who say the green bugs may fly out and leave overnight. Of course hoping for that bit of magic is far down the line.

Each day The Farmer checks the fields, hoping they will soon reach their peak stage of development and complete their cycle and "bug off."

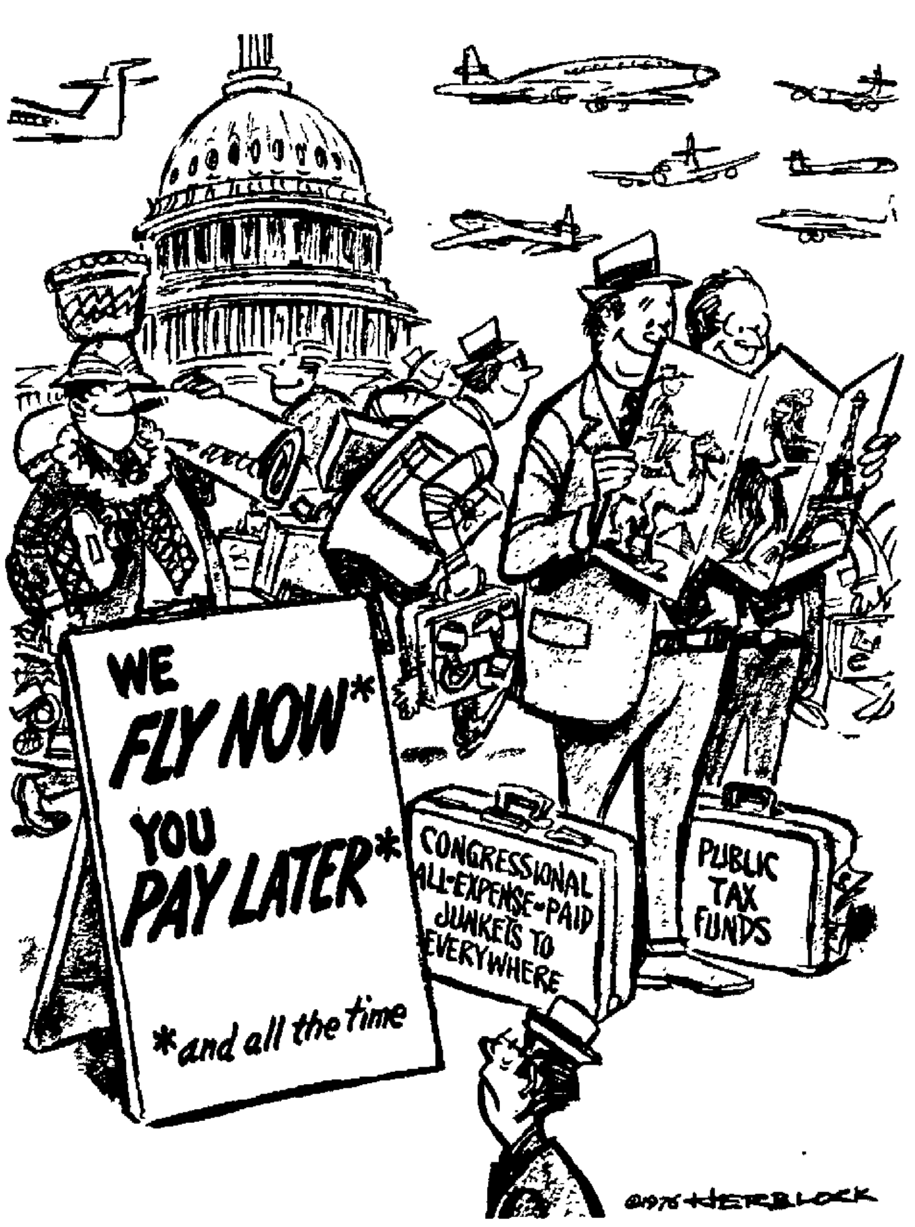
Compassion Now The 'In' Thing

RALPH DE TOLEDANO



WASHINGTON — The fashionable word among Democrats today is "compassion" — although they never quite tell you what they are compassionate about. Nearly every speaker at the Democratic convention gave it a rhetorical working over. And well they should have.

A little less than two years ago, compassion was hardly on Democratic minds. The party's spokesmen, its elected officials, and its propagators of the faith were savagely tearing to shreds every Republican, from President Nixon down, who had even the remotest connection with Watergate.

They put pressure, through their allies in the national media, on the Justice Department to prosecute what was strictly a political case against former Treasury Secretary John Connally.

They ranged the country crying havoc and outrage at publicans and sinners, making publican somehow synonymous with Republican. They demanded a head for an eye and a jaw for a tooth. No stone was left unturned in the Pharisaical search for victims — not even the gravestones of those who had the temerity to die before the Watergate howlers reached them.

Now, with the Bible elevated to the status of campaign document, the Democrats have turned to the words of Ecclesiastes: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

Ecclesiastes preached of "a time to break down, and a time to build up . . . a time to keep silence, and a time to speak." There was a time for hate, and now we have arrived at a time for compassion.

So in speaking about morality, Jimmy Carter and his running-mate, Walter Mondale, will look back at Watergate but say nothing about those Democratic colleagues who have made of Congress a cloaca maxima, the sewer of ancient Rome.

The good peanut farmer does not find the time to speak about those Democratic congressmen who have been dipping into the till, junketing to foreign fleshpots on the taxpayer's money, double-dipping to their heart's desire by collecting their "expenses" twice — once from the Pentagon and once from the State Department.

There will be no sermons about the congressman convicted of soliciting the favors of policewomen disguised as prostitutes where the red lights twinkle. With great compassion, they will look the other way at the transgressions of a Democratic leader who put his doxy on the congressional payroll.

A compassionate media will not demand of them that they break their silence or ask them why they see wrongdoing by a Republican as a sin against humanity, whereas wrongdoing by a Democrat is nothing more than a slight indiscretion to be regarded with a sly wink.

Mark Twain was not being compassionate when he wrote: "it could probably be shown by facts and figures that there is no distinctly native American criminal class except Congress."

Some of the Democrats of the 94th Congress have been doing their upmost to prove him right, but we will get no hint of this from the "party of compassion" as it makes the heavens resound with its self-praise.

Yes, compassion's the "in" thing this year in Democratic circles, and will continue to be right up to election day. Carter and Mondale will be compassionate to every member of their party. Where their colleagues are concerned, they will see no evil, hear no evil, and speak no evil.

Presidential-hopeful Carter will take no note that vice presidential-hopeful Mondale attempted to rig the tax laws so that they would fatten the coffers of Minnesota's biggest conglomerate corporation. It would not be compassionate to do so.

Between now and November, Republicans should demand an equal share of Jimmy Carter's compassion. But will they get it? I wouldn't bet a peanut on it.

AID Officials Live High In Haiti

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Nestled high on the hills above Port-Au-Prince are fashionable, walled villas, equipped with sparkling swimming pools and staffed by gracious servants.

This is where the U.S. AID officials reside with their families. They came to Haiti to administer U.S. aid. Their mission is to help develop the impoverished nation and feed its hungry people.

A generous portion of the U.S. offering goes to maintain the AID administrators in the high style they have adopted. They live in luxury; they are waited on by servants; they belong to exclusive private clubs. In the evenings, they attend lavish cocktail and dinner parties, where the guests can sample the varied delights of creole cooking.

Yet believe it or not, they collect extra hardship pay for enduring the rigors of Port-Au-Prince. This amounts to an additional 15%, which is tacked on to their salaries. They are also granted two extra weeks of stateside vacation, on top of their normal leave, to recuperate from the hard life.

They draw a generous housing allowance to help pay the rent on their fancy villas. They make biweekly flights to Guantanamo Bay to pick up inexpensive American food from the U.S. commissary. They can claim a generous "educational allowance," too, to help with their children's education.

The AID staff had become so accustomed to the good life, they almost moved their offices into an old luxury hotel, complete with swimming pool and palm-shaded verandas. But it occurred to them the hotel might be a bit ostentatious, so they settled for a more modest building.

After hundreds of thousands of dollars have been squeezed out of the AID budget for the care and comfort of the administrators, the money is usually turned over to the Haitian government to distribute.

Additional amounts are diverted into the pockets of Haitian officials. Grain intended for the poor, for example, has been stolen and sold for profit by corrupt customs officials.

We sent our reporter, Hal Bernton, to Haiti to find out whether any of the aid reaches the people for whom it was intended. With a knapsack on his back, he traveled to the most desolate, drought-stricken region of the tiny Caribbean country. He hiked through the parched mountains to a remote village and lived for more than a week with the people.

He saw naked children too weak from hunger to play, their hair rusted and their bellies bloated by malnutrition.

The villages subsisted largely on mangoes, sucking out every precious drop of juice. But the last mango would soon be devoured. The people didn't know what they would eat after that.

The U.S. AID officials are usually too busy planning and partying in Port-Au-Prince to visit the villagers in their mud huts. Those who make rare appearances usually drive through on jeeps. Most are too tied up with paperwork to leave their desks. They are also reluctant to leave their comfortable quarters.

During the fiscal year that ended on June 30, the U.S. taxpayers donated nearly $18 million in foreign aid to Haiti. A tiny trickle of food-for-work has reached the remote village Bernton visited.

In the past, U.S. aid has also helped to build hospitals, construct roads, tap water and distribute food. This has saved lives and alleviated suffering. But it's the AID officials who are the most comforted, the Haitian officials who are enriched.

Bernton inspected a road construction project, which is partially financed with U.S. development funds. He found 240 peasants slowly building a road to their village, which was located on top of a high mountain plateau. With picks, shovels and wheelbarrows, they moved the road ahead a few inches at a time.

The men were gaunt, lean and angry. For more than two months, they had toiled without a penny in pay. The Haitian government had promised them 50 cents a day. But the money had never made it through the sticky fingers of the Haitian officials.

The ragged workers gathered around Bernton. In broken Creole French, they pleaded: "We have almost nothing left to eat now. We have only one meal a day of cornmeal. Get us our money."

Not only Haitian but U.S. officials are depriving the hungry workers. The great need in the Haitian hinterland is for jobs. But U.S. officials, eager to favor the heavy machinery manufacturers in the United States, have stipulated that most of a $5 million road construction loan must be spent on heavy machinery purchased from U.S. firms.

The field experts told Bernton the new machines will soon join other bulldozers and tractors, which already litter the Haitian countryside. The best way to build roads in Haiti, no matter how inefficient it may seem, is with manpower. And the people desperately need the work.

Bernton spent some time in an impoverished village where the people had no jobs and little land that could be cultivated. Each day, they would scale the steep hillside in search of wood that could be burned into charcoal. After they laboriously produced a few sacks of charcoal, they would trek 10 miles to the nearest market to exchange the charcoal for mangoes.

But they couldn't produce enough charcoal to buy the food they needed. Their children, weak from hunger, sat around listlessly.

It was an agonizing contrast to the villas in the Port-Au-Prince hills, where the U.S. officials are spending money on cocktail parties and creole cooking.

WASHINGTON — Nestled high on the hills above Port-Au-Prince are fashionable, walled villas, equipped with sparkling swimming pools and staffed by gracious servants.

This is where the U.S. AID officials reside with their families. They came to Haiti to administer U.S. aid. Their mission is to help develop the impoverished nation and feed its hungry people.

A generous portion of the U.S. offering goes to maintain the AID administrators in the high style they have adopted. They live in luxury; they are waited on by servants; they belong to exclusive private clubs. In the evenings, they attend lavish cocktail and dinner parties, where the guests can sample the varied delights of creole cooking.

Yet believe it or not, they collect extra hardship pay for enduring the rigors of Port-Au-Prince. This amounts to an additional 15%, which is tacked on to their salaries. They are also granted two extra weeks of stateside vacation, on top of their normal leave, to recuperate from the hard life.

They draw a generous housing allowance to help pay the rent on their fancy villas. They make biweekly flights to Guantanamo Bay to pick up inexpensive American food from the U.S. commissary. They can claim a generous "educational allowance," too, to help with their children's education.

The AID staff had become so accustomed to the good life, they almost moved their offices into an old luxury hotel, complete with swimming pool and palm-shaded verandas. But it occurred to them the hotel might be a bit ostentatious, so they settled for a more modest building.

After hundreds of thousands of dollars have been squeezed out of the AID budget for the care and comfort of the administrators, the money is usually turned over to the Haitian government to distribute.

Additional amounts are diverted into the pockets of Haitian officials. Grain intended for the poor, for example, has been stolen and sold for profit by corrupt customs officials.

We sent our reporter, Hal Bernton, to Haiti to find out whether any of the aid reaches the people for whom it was intended. With a knapsack on his back, he traveled to the most desolate, drought-stricken region of the tiny Caribbean country. He hiked through the parched mountains to a remote village and lived for more than a week with the people.

He saw naked children too weak from hunger to play, their hair rusted and their bellies bloated by malnutrition.

The villages subsisted largely on mangoes, sucking out every precious drop of juice. But the last mango would soon be devoured. The people didn't know what they would eat after that.

The U.S. AID officials are usually too busy planning and partying in Port-Au-Prince to visit the villagers in their mud huts. Those who make rare appearances usually drive through on jeeps. Most are too tied up with paperwork to leave their desks. They are also reluctant to leave their comfortable quarters.

During the fiscal year that ended on June 30, the U.S. taxpayers donated nearly $18 million in foreign aid to Haiti. A tiny trickle of food-for-work has reached the remote village Bernton visited.

In the past, U.S. aid has also helped to build hospitals, construct roads, tap water and distribute food. This has saved lives and alleviated suffering. But it's the AID officials who are the most comforted, the Haitian officials who are enriched.

Bernton inspected a road construction project, which is partially financed with U.S. development funds. He found 240 peasants slowly building a road to their village, which was located on top of a high mountain plateau. With picks, shovels and wheelbarrows, they moved the road ahead a few inches at a time.

The men were gaunt, lean and angry. For more than two months, they had toiled without a penny in pay. The Haitian government had promised them 50 cents a day. But the money had never made it through the sticky fingers of the Haitian officials.

The ragged workers gathered around Bernton. In broken Creole French, they pleaded: "We have almost nothing left to eat now. We have only one meal a day of cornmeal. Get us our money."

Not only Haitian but U.S. officials are depriving the hungry workers. The great need in the Haitian hinterland is for jobs. But U.S. officials, eager to favor the heavy machinery manufacturers in the United States, have stipulated that most of a $5 million road construction loan must be spent on heavy machinery purchased from U.S. firms.

The field experts told Bernton the new machines will soon join other bulldozers and tractors, which already litter the Haitian countryside. The best way to build roads in Haiti, no matter how inefficient it may seem, is with manpower. And the people desperately need the work.

Bernton spent some time in an impoverished village where the people had no jobs and little land that could be cultivated. Each day, they would scale the steep hillside in search of wood that could be burned into charcoal. After they laboriously produced a few sacks of charcoal, they would trek 10 miles to the nearest market to exchange the charcoal for mangoes.

But they couldn't produce enough charcoal to buy the food they needed. Their children, weak from hunger, sat around listlessly.

It was an agonizing contrast to the villas in the Port-Au-Prince hills, where the U.S. officials are spending money on cocktail parties and creole cooking.

FORST . . . dances.

Casselberry, Fla. (AP) — Susan Forst does her belly dancing at a fast clip. She works for a hairstyling salon catering to men in this central Florida community.

Miss Forst, 23, applied for a receptionist's job at the shop two weeks ago and mentioned that she had been studying bellydancing. The owner asked her if she would like to twist and turn for his clients.

She jumped at the idea.

"I love to dance," Miss Forst said. "I'm involved with it and don't turn down the chance to perform."

Miss Forst, known to the clientele as Circe, dances to the strains of Eastern music.

And how do the customers feel about a shimmy and a shake with their shampoo?

She said their reaction is usually one of surprise.

"They're unprepared. We joke with customers, try to make them feel as much at home as we can."

Rebuilding Lives Slow And Painful

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Hundreds of Big Thompson Canyon residents who survived flash flooding that killed at least 100 others began the slow, painful process of rebuilding their lives Wednesday.

There were more than 80 bodies in an old red brick hospital transformed into a morgue and in refrigeration trucks on the hospital grounds. Other bodies were reported found but not recovered, and officials expected the death toll to rise past 100.

Searchers used infrared cameras equipped with heat sensing devices Wednesday in hopes of finding more survivors.

"We want to see if we can't find some people who might be alive in the rubble. It's the same type of equipment used in Vietnam to locate the Viet Cong," said Pueblo city detective John Lopez, who arrived at the flood scene with four of the specially-equipped cameras.

As the death toll climbed, bulldozers and graders scooped muck from along the twisting Big Thompson River. The once peaceful stream had finally dropped back into its banks, strewn with wreckage of homes and trailers.

A 100-member security force patrolled the wasted canyon for looters.

Sheriff Robert Watson discounted suggestions of widespread thievery but said there had been several unconfirmed reports of youths entering the wrecked area with empty knapsacks and leaving with them full.

At federal relief centers in Loveland and nearby Fort Collins and Estes Park, flood victims lined up to meet with housing, insurance, unemployment and legal aid officials.

Victor Klein, 56, worried about what would happen to his Fort Medina grocery store. Its silver-lettered sign glittered under sunny skies, but shelves inside were caked with up to two feet of mud. About 20 per cent of his trade was tourists.

"We'll have the curious out here to see what damage there was," he said. "But once they're gone . . ." His voice faded.

Fast Flu-Bill Action Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders in the health field, alarmed by the deadly, flu-like illness in Pennsylvania and other states, laid plans Wednesday for rapid passage of swine flu legislation.

The House Commerce Committee set a meeting for Thursday to consider approval of a federal insurance plan for the vaccination program. A Senate health subcommittee called a hearing on the issue at the same time.

In Hartford, Conn., Aetna Life and Casualty said it would be willing to provide product liability insurance for the vaccine manufacturers under terms of the bill before the House committee. It was the first insurance company to state publicly its position on the measure.

What Killed Legionnaires Still Unidentified

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Scientists said Wednesday they think the mystery disease that has killed 22 persons since an American Legion convention here last month was probably caused by a virus, a fungus or a toxic substance, but they still have not identified it.

"Whatever it is, it's one of the most dangerous things in the world," said Jay Satz, Pennsylvania's top virologist. "I've never seen anything like it."

Researchers at a state laboratory in Philadelphia and the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta have been working nonstop since Monday to try to determine what caused the disease whch has hospitalized 130 persons.

State health officials have confirmed 22 deaths, and Philadelphia hospital officials said Wednesday a 23rd victim had died. But that last death was not included in the official death toll.

CDC Director Dr. David J. Sencer told an Atlanta news conference Wednesday that scientists "do not know what the disease is," but "we've ruled out most of the important bacterial (diseases).

"We cannot say it is swine influenza or say that it is not," Sencer said.

It's no small pleasure.

Arm Of Viking's Scoop May Be Stuck For Good

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking's stuck dirt-scooping sampling arm may be jammed for good, officials said Wednesday. But if one crucial experiment can be carried out later this week, the over-all impact may not be too serious.

Assuming the organic analysis experiment can be done on Friday, Mission Director Tom Young said: "We would have carried out studies of Mars soil with three analytical instruments."

However, he said that the failure to fix the dirt-scooping sample arm would mean Viking 1 would have been able to analyze soil obtained from only one spot in the lander's neighborhood.

Officials planned to try and carry out on Friday the organic analysis — a search for basic building blocks of life — for which the arm was scooping dirt when it jammed Tuesday. However, they suspect that enough dirt for the test was obtained by the telescoping arm during its first digging mission a week ago.

The test is considered crucial because of its potential contribution to the search for life, which thus far has yielded ambiguous results. Scientists say they are leaning toward the view that results from the minilaboratory thus far are not caused by life processes.

Young said the robot lander's two camera "eyes" would be ordered to scrutinize the stuck arm Friday to help determine what is wrong.

The arm, which is made of two thin metal ribbons that reel up like a tape measure when it is retracted, jammed as it was being pulled back into its housing Wednesday after scooping a handful of soil.

Young said that if the problem is caused by a failure of the arm's electronic "brain," duplicate systems can be brought into play. If the motor has failed there is probably nothing to be done, he said.

Bald Duck Earns His Food

Tampa, Fla. (AP) — What lives like a thoroughbred, eats like a hog and romps with dogs, birds and a cat?

Soupy, the bald duck who looks like a plucked chicken.

A 73-year-old widow who befriended the funny-looking, featherless creature a year ago reports that he's begun earning his keep.

He's grown into a watchduck, says Alice Darling, who took the scrawny creature in with her three dogs, three birds and a cat.

"Oh, man, does he quack when someone goes in or out. He doesn't like the cat, and doesn't like people coming in here. He has a furious yell . . . and waddles around in a fit."

Mrs. Darling says Soupy doesn't exactly work dirt cheap. He eats four heads of lettuce a day, two or three loaves of bread a week and likes special gravel in his water dish to help him digest his meals.

During a nightly cease-fire with the cat, Soupy sleeps curled up next to the furball with one foot in and one foot out of his cage.

Soupy was hatched last summer in Sligo, Ky.

Scientists at the University of Louisville couldn't explain why he was born without feathers or why he couldn't fly. They feared he would freeze in the cold weather.

Last Thanksgiving, a Tampa travel agent drove to Kentucky, retrieved Soupy and gave him to Mrs. Darling.

"He keeps me doing things," says Mrs. Darling. "You say 'Soupy' and talk to him and he comes running and quacking to you."

Alleged Giancana Associate Vanishes

Miami (UPI) — The FBI disclosed Wednesday it is investigating the disappearance of an alleged underworld figure who told the Senate Intelligence Committee he took part in six CIA attempts to assassinate Fidel Castro.

John Roselli, a reputed onetime associate of slain Chicago underworld leader Sam Giancana, vanished July 28 from the home of his brother-in-law in the Fort Lauderdale suburb of Plantation, Fla.

According to the FBI, Roselli borrowed his sister's car, stowed his golf clubs in the trunk and left the house, apparently for a round of golf. When he failed to return, his sister reported the disappearance directly to the FBI.

The FBI said the borrowed car was found in the parking garage at Miami International Airport.

An FBI spokesman said it had examined the auto but declined to say whether the golf clubs were still in the trunk. "I can't comment on what we may have found or not found in the car," the spokesman said.

Asked if the FBI thought Roselli was still in the United States, the spokesman said, "I can't comment any further."

Alarm Sounded

Canberra, Australia (AP) — Adm. Noel Gayler, retiring chief of U.S. Pacific forces, said Wednesday the Soviet Union is trying to establish port facilities for its fishing fleet in the South Pacific and warned that it could lead to a Soviet military presence.

Defense officials of the United States, Australia and New Zealand, completing a two-day meeting here as the ANZUS defense alliance, decided to extend more economic aid to South Pacific islands in hopes of heading off such Russian penetration.

The Soviet news agency Tass, reporting on the session here, said it could be summed up as "the return to the times of cold war" and said the "hackneyed allegations about the 'Soviet menace' were rehashed."

Alleged Giancana Associate Vanishes

Miami (UPI) — The FBI disclosed Wednesday it is investigating the disappearance of an alleged underworld figure who told the Senate Intelligence Committee he took part in six CIA attempts to assassinate Fidel Castro.

John Roselli, a reputed onetime associate of slain Chicago underworld leader Sam Giancana, vanished July 28 from the home of his brother-in-law in the Fort Lauderdale suburb of Plantation, Fla.

According to the FBI, Roselli borrowed his sister's car, stowed his golf clubs in the trunk and left the house, apparently for a round of golf. When he failed to return, his sister reported the disappearance directly to the FBI.

The FBI said the borrowed car was found in the parking garage at Miami International Airport.

An FBI spokesman said it had examined the auto but declined to say whether the golf clubs were still in the trunk. "I can't comment on what we may have found or not found in the car," the spokesman said.

Asked if the FBI thought Roselli was still in the United States, the spokesman said, "I can't comment any further."

Alarm Sounded

Canberra, Australia (AP) — Adm. Noel Gayler, retiring chief of U.S. Pacific forces, said Wednesday the Soviet Union is trying to establish port facilities for its fishing fleet in the South Pacific and warned that it could lead to a Soviet military presence.

Defense officials of the United States, Australia and New Zealand, completing a two-day meeting here as the ANZUS defense alliance, decided to extend more economic aid to South Pacific islands in hopes of heading off such Russian penetration.

The Soviet news agency Tass, reporting on the session here, said it could be summed up as "the return to the times of cold war" and said the "hackneyed allegations about the 'Soviet menace' were rehashed."

Poll: Reagan Favored As Ford's Running Mate

By LOUIS HARRIS

If the Republican party nominates Gerald Ford as its presidential candidate, 25% of Republicans and independents nationwide would like to see former California Gov. Ronald Reagan as his running mate.

Former Treasury Secretary John Connally finishes as the second highest choice, followed by Sen. Charles Percy of Ill., Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee.

A number of Republicans has suggested that a Ford-Reagan ticket would unite the GOP for the fall campaign, after the divisive spring primaries and the hard-fought battle for delegates this summer. However, Reagan has steadfastly maintained that he would turn down any offer of second place on the Republican ticket, and those closest to him believe he will stick by that vow.

This latest Harris Survey of a cross section of 643 Republican and independent voters, taken after the Democratic National Convention, reveals sharply different patterns of preference for the GOP vice presidential nomination:

Both Reagan and Connally are stronger among rank-and-file Republicans than among independents.

Louis Harris

Connally Is Second

Among GOP voters, Reagan is the choice of 32% as President Ford's running mate. Connally and Rockefeller follow at 16 and 10% respectively.

Among independent voters, Reagan is preferred by no more than 16%, followed by Sen. Percy at 15%, Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson at 12% and Sen. Baker at 11%.

Thus, if a successful Gerald Ford wanted to heal wounds inside the Republican Party, the most popular choices would be Reagan or Connally. However, if he wanted to extend the appeal of his ticket beyond the 23% of the electorate that calls itself Republican, he might do better with Percy, Richardson or Baker.

A central problem any Republican candidate must face this year is the apparent massive defection of southern voters from party ranks. Carter now leads the President by 73-22% and Reagan by 71-25% in the South. With the exception of 1964, the Republicans have either carried the South or done very well there in recent presidential elections. Because he did well in the southern primaries, the prevailing wisdom is that with Reagan on the ticket, the Republicans could win back voters in the South.

However, when southern Republicans and independents were asked their preference for a Ford running mate, John Connally finished ahead of Ronald Reagan by 26 to 20%, with Howard Baker of Tennessee in third place, at 12%. In terms of rank-and-file sentiment, Connally apparently would have more appeal than Reagan in the South as the vice presidential choice.

Of course, before Gerald Ford has the luxury, of choosing his running mate, he must first win his party's nomination in Kansas City two weeks from now. Reagan's staff disputes the claims of the President's campaigners that he passed the necessary 1,130 delegate votes necessary to nail down the nomination. Only the actual count on the first ballot roll call will give a final answer to that question.

Reagan Gives Reasons

Jackson, Miss. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, pressed about his choice of a liberal running mate, said Wednesday he picked Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania to bring the Republican party together and save the GOP in the Northeast.

Reagan was here to court Mississippi's 30 uncommitted Republican delegates

Reagan said his selection of Schweiker "was to bring two groups of the party together, that have been more or less estranged, and one that was more or less regional. I was concerned about the Northeast, and how it just seemed to be outside the party "

"I don't write off any state I don't want to write off any region, ' he said.

Kaanapali — "Him Numbah one good looking!"

"Love was simple in old Hawaii," said the haole advertising man. (Haoles are the white Caucasians. The first were the whalers. Then came the New England missionaries.)

The island of Maui is growing with hotels and condominiums and the rummy maitai is $2.50.

When the third Kamehameha became king, the missionaries convinced him that easy island love was a sin. They got him to pass a law against it. And they set up spies to catch the criminals.

The easy-going lovers, caught in the act, were sent over here to Maui, sentenced to hard labor on the roads.

When you drive your rented car under the coco palms at Kaanapali, you are driving on a primrose path paved with good intentions

☆ ☆ ☆

In the early morning, the beach at Kaanapali is breathless. The waves lap-lap the most expensive sand in the world.

(Do they lap-lap? I had shabu-shabu beef at a Japanese place last night. It's brothy stuff. The waitress explained how it got its name: "Shabu-shabu, like waves sound on beach.")

The beach is lined with hotels. Presumably filled with people without a care in the world. Aloha deh, people, from your friendly, sandy correspondent.

☆ ☆ ☆

Whatever happened to Coconut Willie?

Coconut Willie was a haole from the mainland He wove green coconut hats on the beach. He sold them to tourists. He could weave them better and quicker than any Hawaiian.

There were some wild stories about him. It was before the days of dropouts and nonconformists. And a mainland white man weaving hats was more than the people on the cocktail lanai could bear.

Hence they thought up romantic stories about him.

One man swore that Coconut Willie had been president of U.S. Steel. He had given up the whole thing for the simple native life.

☆ ☆ ☆

Another I heard was that Coconut Willie had been a famous opera star. His girl friend hit him a karate chop in the Adam's apple. It ruined his voice.

He was so downcast by her lack of appreciation and, having nothing left but a discordant croak, he found solace in the native island way.

A couple of times, I almost went down to interview Willie. But I fought it off.

Sure as could be, he would have turned out to be just an ordinary bloke who found something he could do well and make a living at it.

It would have ruined romance.

The advertising man said: "I came from the mainland myself, and I like it here. I think of myself as an islander now. But the idea of coming out and making like a native — that's a nutty idea."

The real romantics head for the South Sea islands. A man I know did this a few years ago. Dropped out, leaving job, mortgage, wife and children. He wound up in Tahiti. I saw him a year ago.

He had an island wahine and two children, and he kept looking at his watch.

He said: "If I get home late, she beats me with a canoe paddle "

Most people feel sure the brown Polynesian of the islands is the most carefree of all. Bathed in warm sunshine.

Democrats In Missouri To Pick Litton Successor

By The Associated Press

Missouri Democrats must choose a senatorial nominee to succeed Rep Jerry Litton, who won Tuesday's primary but died in a plane carsh on his way to a victory celebration. Also killed were his wife and their two children and the pilot and his son

Missouri's Democratic Executive Committee is to meet Saturday to plan a meeting of the 60-member Central Committee to decide who will take Litton's place as nominee for the seat being vacated by the retirement of Sen. Stuart Symington.

John McIlroy, state party chairman, said the committee would have a free hand in choosing a candidate to run against the Republican nominee, Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth. But he said the committee would take into consideration results of Tuesday's balloting.

On Wednesday, with 95 per cent of the precincts reported, Litton had 45 per cent of the vote at 374,023. Former Gov. Warren Hearnes had 216,653 votes and Symington's son, Rep. James Symington, had 209,033.

Missouri voters also defeated a proposed amendment to allow limited state aid for private schools.

Life Begins At Forty:

Electronic Scanner Checkout Systems Controversial

By JOANNE FARRIS

A READER WRITES: Your recent article in regard to computerized cash registers presents what I feel to be a prejudicial viewpoint.

I am enclosing a letter from the Kroger Company on this same subject, in which I've underlined several relevant points. In fairness to your readers I feel you should publish an article to present the other side of the story.

COMMENT: I agree. This question regarding the electronic scanner checkout system is an important one for every consumer. Furthermore it will involve hundreds of thousands of dollars for every supermarket chain that introduces them into service. So everyone wants to know all about them.

How do they work? The cashier passes the coded patch on the item label over a window inset in the checkout counter. Under the counter, a laser beam scans the patch and sends the information to a computer which has been pre-programmed with price information for that store.

The information flashes back to the counter and instantly the item is printed out on a receipt. The printout includes the name of the product as well as the price.

What are the benefits to the customer? Checking out will be fast. The receipt will give the shopper an itemized list of what was purchased and the price. Pricing errors by checkers will be eliminated. Some stores suggest that grocery prices may drop (or rise) once the new system goes into full operation, but no one is using this as a sales pitch.

What will the electronic scanner checkout system do for the store? Once a store has paid for the system, which can cost $125,000 per unit to install, it will be able to save money.

Taking stock will be done automatically. Store personnel will be able to check inventory at a glance, and advance ordering will prevent most item shortages.

If customers accept the system and individual items no longer have to be price-marked, there will be a large saving. Prices will only have to be marked on shelves and on price lists posted around the store.

Kroger Company reports that at the present time a large supermarket has to have employes hand-stamp 200,000 cans and packages a week.

What are the drawbacks? Customers, who are increasingly cost-conscious in view of our continuing inflation, believe that price-comparison shopping will be too difficult if prices are not shown on each item. The Kroger Company letter reports that stores do not intend to remove individual prices "until we are convinced that customers understand and trust the system and that their price information needs are being adequately met."

If the computers are widely adopted, one estimate suggests there will be 5,000 of them in use by 1980, consumers may not be able to find a noncomputerized store in which to shop. Convenience stores are not likely to employ this equipment because of its cost.

It Didn't Work

Noblesville, Ind. (AP) — W. Kenneth Pickett hoped that a musical "scarecrow" was the way to keep raccoons from eating his sweet corn.

So he blasted rock music out over his garden one evening, hoping it would drive the coons away. His first response came from the neighbors, who called around 10 p.m. and told him to turn down the sound.

Surveying the results of his experiment, he found six raccoons asleep in the middle of the field, apparently lulled by the music — and their full stomachs.

Life Begins At Forty:

Electronic Scanner Checkout Systems Controversial

By JOANNE FARRIS

A READER WRITES: Your recent article in regard to computerized cash registers presents what I feel to be a prejudicial viewpoint.

I am enclosing a letter from the Kroger Company on this same subject, in which I've underlined several relevant points. In fairness to your readers I feel you should publish an article to present the other side of the story.

COMMENT: I agree. This question regarding the electronic scanner checkout system is an important one for every consumer. Furthermore it will involve hundreds of thousands of dollars for every supermarket chain that introduces them into service. So everyone wants to know all about them.

How do they work? The cashier passes the coded patch on the item label over a window inset in the checkout counter. Under the counter, a laser beam scans the patch and sends the information to a computer which has been pre-programmed with price information for that store.

The information flashes back to the counter and instantly the item is printed out on a receipt. The printout includes the name of the product as well as the price.

What are the benefits to the customer? Checking out will be fast. The receipt will give the shopper an itemized list of what was purchased and the price. Pricing errors by checkers will be eliminated. Some stores suggest that grocery prices may drop (or rise) once the new system goes into full operation, but no one is using this as a sales pitch.

What will the electronic scanner checkout system do for the store? Once a store has paid for the system, which can cost $125,000 per unit to install, it will be able to save money.

Taking stock will be done automatically. Store personnel will be able to check inventory at a glance, and advance ordering will prevent most item shortages.

If customers accept the system and individual items no longer have to be price-marked, there will be a large saving. Prices will only have to be marked on shelves and on price lists posted around the store.

Kroger Company reports that at the present time a large supermarket has to have employes hand-stamp 200,000 cans and packages a week.

What are the drawbacks? Customers, who are increasingly cost-conscious in view of our continuing inflation, believe that price-comparison shopping will be too difficult if prices are not shown on each item. The Kroger Company letter reports that stores do not intend to remove individual prices "until we are convinced that customers understand and trust the system and that their price information needs are being adequately met."

If the computers are widely adopted, one estimate suggests there will be 5,000 of them in use by 1980, consumers may not be able to find a noncomputerized store in which to shop. Convenience stores are not likely to employ this equipment because of its cost.

Peters: Tax Hike Is Possible

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

As state financial indicators stack up now, "I would not foreclose the possibility of a sales tax increase, and a retroactive income tax increase" to Jan. 1, Nebraska Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said Wednesday.

Most official talk to date has focused only on the inevitability of boosting by .5% the 2.5% state sales tax rate, to make up the shortfall between underestimated revenues and fixed legislative appropriations for 1976-77.

The companion sales-income tax actions might be considered without calling a Unicameral special session, Peters said, and far before November 15, the State Board of Equalization deadline to set calendar 1977 tax rates.

A member of the Equalization Board, Peters said Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas is examining legal questions about the board's jurisdiction to convene earlier and change the tax rates it held steady in April.

The board then also left unchanged the individual income tax rate, 15% of federal liability.

Looking at alternatives available to the state board, Peters said Douglas has been asked to investigate the "10% rule." If revenue estimates are off by 10%, either high or low, then the governor can convene a special meeting to reconsider existing tax rates.

Four months ago, Revenue Department projections were $517 million, which will probably end up "at least $40 million" short, Peters said. And a $475 million revised estimate is subject to further change, possibly downward, after current analyses.

Peters said the Equalization Board hopes to have an answer from Douglas soon, and the governor, also a board member, might make an announcement regarding alternatives next week.

Being eyed in the jurisdictional research is a meeting after which an increased sales tax would go into effect immediately in the next month. Any income tax hike must be made in 1% increments.

Peters said board action "would be a cheaper approach" than a special legislative session. Most state officials are skeptical about that avenue, saying it's unlikely given the immediate state dollar needs and built-in legislative reluctance to cut spending levels once set.

"The problem that we see coming is particularly in the last six months of this fiscal year," January through June, "where payments usually exceed revenues," Peters said.

He predicted a "substantial spread" at current tax rates. Asked to elaborate, he could only say that "shortfalls will be measured in millions of dollars," aside from the problem of monthly balance shortages meddling with anticipated averages.

"How bad those are is what we're working on now," analyzing projected cash flow, he said. Yet the bottom line is obvious: "We've got to do one of two things or a combination. Reduce expenditure, or raise more money" or both.

"We can't wait until January to accomplish this," when any new rates set in November by the Equalization Board would go into effect. Because of collection lags, he explained, by the time those rates would put required dollars in the state's hands, the fiscal year would be 10 months over, causing a four-month bind.

From new income tax rates, "we would get a small amount in February, but it wouldn't be enough to make any difference," Peters said. The January sales tax, about $2 million, wouldn't arrive until March.

Thus, "the first substantial shot of income tax would be in April" from first-quarter withholding, however, because of month-end payee deadlines, the dollars realistically wouldn't arrive in state cofferes until May, he said.

Peters said the Equalization Board could double or triple tax rates in November and it wouldn't solve the problems in January and ensuing months when the state probably still couldn't pay all its bills. He noted there's only one prepaid tax, that on cigarettes.

A .5% state sales tax increase to 3% would produce an estimated $28-30 million, Peters said, but the $2.5 million monthly average income wouldn't automatically hold true. Thus, matching the amount of tax revenues Nebraska will be short with pay-out due dates can indicate what month a higher sales tax rate should go into effect for a balanced budget.

That also means if the rate stays at 2.5% too long, a bigger increase might be required to produce necessary revenue. Moreover, any income tax rate hike — even if retroactive — is subject to delayed collections that won't produce some revenues until after the state has begun the 1977-78 fiscal year.

A Reward? Sure, Here . .

Providence, R.I. (AP) — Robert A. Greenway Jr. says it just wasn't his day.

Greenway, 62, Providence, told police he was walking home at night when a man ran up, grabbed a bag out of his hands and fled. The bag contained a six-pack of beer and tomatoes.

A few minutes later, however, a second man brought the bag back, Greenway said. "I saw what happened and I got your bag back," the second man said, according to Greenway.

Greenway said he offered the man two quarters but the man complained that wasn't enough. The man then pulled out a gun and proceeded to rob him of $130, Greenway said.

Hy-Gain Employes Walk Out

A group of Hy-Gain Electronics Corp. employes walked off the job Wednesday afternoon to protest what they feel to be undesireable working conditions at a Hy-Gain plant located north of Fletcher Ave.

According to one of the protesting employés, who called The Star late Wednesday afternoon, the walkout involved about 30 people.

Howard Sachs, Hy-Gain's Lincoln operations manager, said the protestors numbered about 20, or about half of the employes who work at the plant.

The caller, who declined to be named, said that the plant harbors "mice, lice, snakes and birds. We have mice running on our lunch table."

In addition, men and women employes have had to use the same restroom for the past couple of weeks because of malfunctioning equipment, the caller said.

"We have had problems with the restrooms off and on for the last few days," Sachs said. But "we had been taking steps" to remedy the situation.

Apparently, the employes didn't think "things were moving fast enough," he continued.

Sachs also said he doubted the caller's report about the vermin problem.

The caller indicated that the personnel department had been made aware of the situation several times this week.

However, according to Sachs, the first complaint didn't reach the pesonnel department until about noon Wednesday. Company representatives, who went out to the plant after the call, arrived after the employes had left, he said.

Sachs said he plans to visit the plant Thursday morning to discuss the employes' grievances with them.

Report Shows Birth Rate Dropped

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska birth rate dropped from 15.4 per 1,000 in 1974 to 15.3 in 1975, according to a recently released report from the State Department of Health's Bureau of Vital Statistics.

On the national level, the 1975 birth rate was 14.8, compared with 15.0 in 1974.

Of Nebraska's 23,658 live births last year, 12,110 were male and 11,548 were female, creating a state sex ratio of 1,049 male births for every 1,000 females born, the report said.

A breakdown according to race shows that 92.5% of the 1975 births were white, 4.4% were Negro, 1.4% were Mexican-American, 1% were Indian and .7% included all other races.

The statistics also showed that most mothers giving birth last year (37.5) were between the ages of 20 and 24 years, while 32.5 were between 25 and 29 years. This information "lends some support to the theory that people may be delaying their families since the percentage of all births to mothers of 25 to 29 years has been steadily increasing since 1971," the report said.

Nebraska's youngest mothers were 12-years-old and the oldest were 47-years-old.

Out-of-wedlock births, totaling 2,095, increased 6% from 1974's 1,976. During 1975, the out-of-wedlock birth rate increased 88.6 per 1,000 live births, the report said, adding, "both the number and the rate are approaching the record highs of 1972 when there were 2,167 for a 92.3 rate."

Lancaster County had 232 such births in 1975.

The percentage of birth defects, reported by the Birth Defects Registry, remained at 2.2% during 1974 and 1975. The 1975 figure was based on 23,875 live births and still births.

Overall, live births averaged one every 22.2 minutes or 64.8 each day. The month with the largest number of births was August and the month recording the least number was November. The most common weight at birth was between seven pounds and seven pounds, 15 ounces.

Of the 2,626 abortions performed in Nebraska during 1975, 435 took place in Lancaster County, the report indicated. However, of all children born in Nebraska, 2,582 were born to Lancaster County residents. These included 25 sets of twins, 1,337 males and 1,235 females.

According to the bureau report, the 1975 death rate of 9.7 was the lowest it has been in twenty years. Although there were 14,569 resident deaths last year, this figure is 3% lower than the 1974 total of 15,016. Lancaster County residents dying in 1975 totaled 1,299.

Heart disease remained the number one cause of death in Nebraska last year. However, there was a decline from 370.4 per 100,000 in 1974 to 356.7. On the other hand, death by cancer rose from 172.3 per 100,000 in 1974, to 179.1 in 1975.

"The average age at the time of death remained the same at 69.6 years," the bureau said. "However, the average age for males decreased slightly to 66.7 years and increased slightly to 73.1 years for females."

While the number of marriages continued to decline in 1975, the number of divorces steadily increased.

The 1975 marriage rate, 8.5, is the lowest in 10 years, equaling the 1966 rate, the report said. The number of marriages totaled 13,087, which was the lowest recorded since 1967. Included in the state total were 1,604 marriages performed in Lancaster County.

Of all Nebraska marriages in 1975, 66.1% were first marriages for both the bride and bridegroom, 8.6% were first marriages for the brides only, 8% were first marriages for the bridegrooms only, and 17.2% were first marriages for neither.

Following the national trend, the number of divorces rose 7.6% to 5,504. Of these, 916 took place in Lancaster County.

"Couples married less than five years accounted for 43% of the total divorces, those married from five to nine years 26%, and those married 10 or more years 31%," the bureau reported.

All Lincoln Schools Will Be Ready For Classes

The smells of new paint and freshly cut lumber will greet students at some Lincoln public schools when they open their doors for the first day of classes August 30.

In spite of some construction delays, the schools will be ready for classes, according to Rudy Bauer, director of operations and maintenance for the system.

The big delay will be in completion of the joint city-school recreation facility at Irving Junior High, 22nd and Van Dorn. It will be late October or early November before physical education classes can use the $1.1 million complex, he speculated.

A new media center in the basement of Lincoln High will be ready, but other work on the structure will be in progress for about a month, he added.

Stairways, installation of an elevator and air conditioning, a weight room and locker rooms will have to be completed. Most of the roof and all of the windows are also being replaced, Bauer said.

Conversion of a corridor and two counselor's offices at Zeman School into two classrooms will be done in time for classes. Remodeling at Calvert, Hawthorne, Prescott and Northeast High will be in final stages when school opens, Bauer added.

"All of the buildings will be usable. We won't have to delay the opening of any of them," he said.

Peters: Tax Hike Is Possible

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

As state financial indicators stack up now, "I would not foreclose the possibility of a sales tax increase, and a retroactive income tax increase" to Jan. 1, Nebraska Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said Wednesday.

Most official talk to date has focused only on the inevitability of boosting by .5% the 2.5% state sales tax rate, to make up the shortfall between underestimated revenues and fixed legislative appropriations for 1976-77.

The companion sales-income tax actions might be considered without calling a Unicameral special session, Peters said, and far before November 15, the State Board of Equalization deadline to set calendar 1977 tax rates.

A member of the Equalization Board, Peters said Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas is examining legal questions about the board's jurisdiction to convene earlier and change the tax rates it held steady in April.

The board then also left unchanged the individual income tax rate, 15% of federal liability.

Looking at alternatives available to the state board, Peters said Douglas has been asked to investigate the "10% rule." If revenue estimates are off by 10%, either high or low, then the governor can convene a special meeting to reconsider existing tax rates.

Four months ago, Revenue Department projections were $517 million, which will probably end up "at least $40 million" short, Peters said. And a $475 million revised estimate is subject to further change, possibly downward, after current analyses.

Peters said the Equalization Board hopes to have an answer from Douglas soon, and the governor, also a board member, might make an announcement regarding alternatives next week.

Being eyed in the jurisdictional research is a meeting after which an increased sales tax would go into effect immediately in the next month. Any income tax hike must be made in 1% increments.

Peters said board action "would be a cheaper approach" than a special legislative session. Most state officials are skeptical about that avenue, saying it's unlikely given the immediate state dollar needs and built-in legislative reluctance to cut spending levels once set.

"The problem that we see coming is particularly in the last six months of this fiscal year," January through June, "where payments usually exceed revenues," Peters said.

He predicted a "substantial spread" at current tax rates. Asked to elaborate, he could only say that "shortfalls will be measured in millions of dollars," aside from the problem of monthly balance shortages meddling with anticipated averages.

"How bad those are is what we're working on now," analyzing projected cash flow, he said. Yet the bottom line is obvious: "We've got to do one of two things or a combination. Reduce expenditure, or raise more money" or both.

"We can't wait until January to accomplish this," when any new rates set in November by the Equalization Board would go into effect. Because of collection lags, he explained, by the time those rates would put required dollars in the state's hands, the fiscal year would be 10 months over, causing a four-month bind.

From new income tax rates, "we would get a small amount in February, but it wouldn't be enough to make any difference," Peters said. The January sales tax, about $2 million, wouldn't arrive until March.

Thus, "the first substantial shot of income tax would be in April" from first-quarter withholding, however, because of month-end payee deadlines, the dollars realistically wouldn't arrive in state cofferes until May, he said.

Peters said the Equalization Board could double or triple tax rates in November and it wouldn't solve the problems in January and ensuing months when the state probably still couldn't pay all its bills. He noted there's only one prepaid tax, that on cigarettes.

A .5% state sales tax increase to 3% would produce an estimated $28-30 million, Peters said, but the $2.5 million monthly average income wouldn't automatically hold true. Thus, matching the amount of tax revenues Nebraska will be short with pay-out due dates can indicate what month a higher sales tax rate should go into effect for a balanced budget.

That also means if the rate stays at 2.5% too long, a bigger increase might be required to produce necessary revenue. Moreover, any income tax rate hike — even if retroactive — is subject to delayed collections that won't produce some revenues until after the state has begun the 1977-78 fiscal year.

A Reward? Sure, Here . .

Providence, R.I. (AP) — Robert A. Greenway Jr. says it just wasn't his day.

Greenway, 62, Providence, told police he was walking home at night when a man ran up, grabbed a bag out of his hands and fled. The bag contained a six-pack of beer and tomatoes.

A few minutes later, however, a second man brought the bag back, Greenway said. "I saw what happened and I got your bag back," the second man said, according to Greenway.

Greenway said he offered the man two quarters but the man complained that wasn't enough. The man then pulled out a gun and proceeded to rob him of $130, Greenway said.

Hy-Gain Employes Walk Out

A group of Hy-Gain Electronics Corp. employes walked off the job Wednesday afternoon to protest what they feel to be undesireable working conditions at a Hy-Gain plant located north of Fletcher Ave.

According to one of the protesting employes, who called The Star late Wednesday afternoon, the walkout involved about 30 people.

Howard Sachs, Hy-Gain's Lincoln operations manager, said the protestors numbered about 20, or about half of the employes who work at the plant.

The caller, who declined to be named, said that the plant harbors "mice, lice, snakes and birds. We have mice running on our lunch table."

In addition, men and women employes have had to use the same restroom for the past couple of weeks because of malfunctioning equipment, the caller said.

"We have had problems with the restrooms off and on for the last few days," Sachs said. But "we had been taking steps" to remedy the situation.

Apparently, the employes didn't think "things were moving fast enough," he continued.

Sachs also said he doubted the caller's report about the vermin problem.

The caller indicated that the personnel department had been made aware of the situation several times this week.

However, according to Sachs, the first complaint didn't reach the pesonnel department until about noon Wednesday. Company representatives, who went out to the plant after the call, arrived after the employes had left, he said.

Sachs said he plans to visit the plant Thursday morning to discuss the employes' grievances with them.

Report Shows Birth Rate Dropped

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska birth rate dropped from 15.4 per 1,000 in 1974 to 15.3 in 1975, according to a recently released report from the State Department of Health's Bureau of Vital Statistics.

On the national level, the 1975 birth rate was 14.8, compared with 15.0 in 1974.

Of Nebraska's 23,658 live births last year, 12,110 were male and 11,548 were female, creating a state sex ratio of 1,049 male births for every 1,000 females born, the report said.

A breakdown according to race shows that 92.5% of the 1975 births were white, 4.4% were Negro, 1.4% were Mexican-American, 1% were Indian and .7% included all other races.

The statistics also showed that most mothers giving birth last year (37.5) were between the ages of 20 and 24 years, while 32.5 were between 25 and 29 years. This information "lends some support to the theory that people may be delaying their families since the percentage of all births to mothers of 25 to 29 years has been steadily increasing since 1971," the report said.

Nebraska's youngest mothers were 12-years-old and the oldest were 47-years-old.

Out-of-wedlock births, totaling 2,095, increased 6% from 1974's 1,976. During 1975, the out-of-wedlock birth rate increased 88.6 per 1,000 live births, the report said, adding, "both the number and the rate are approaching the record highs of 1972 when there were 2,167 for a 92.3 rate."

Lancaster County had 232 such births in 1975.

The percentage of birth defects, reported by the Birth Defects Registry, remained at 2.2% during 1974 and 1975. The 1975 figure was based on 23,875 live births and still births.

Overall, live births averaged one every 22.2 minutes or 64.8 each day. The month with the largest number of births was August and the month recording the least number was November. The most common weight at birth was between seven pounds and seven pounds, 15 ounces.

Of the 2,626 abortions performed in Nebraska during 1975, 435 took place in Lancaster County, the report indicated. However, of all children born in Nebraska, 2,582 were born to Lancaster County residents. These included 25 sets of twins, 1,337 males and 1,235 females.

According to the bureau report, the 1975 death rate of 9.7 was the lowest it has been in twenty years. Although there were 14,569 resident deaths last year, this figure is 3% lower than the 1974 total of 15,016. Lancaster County residents dying in 1975 totaled 1,299.

Heart disease remained the number one cause of death in Nebraska last year. However, there was a decline from 370.4 per 100,000 in 1974 to 356.7. On the other hand, death by cancer rose from 172.3 per 100,000 in 1974, to 179.1 in 1975.

"The average age at the time of death remained the same at 69.6 years," the bureau said. "However, the average age for males decreased slightly to 66.7 years and increased slightly to 73.1 years for females."

While the number of marriages continued to decline in 1975, the number of divorces steadily increased.

The 1975 marriage rate, 8.5, is the lowest in 10 years, equaling the 1966 rate, the report said. The number of marriages totaled 13,087, which was the lowest recorded since 1967. Included in the state total were 1,604 marriages performed in Lancaster County.

Of all Nebraska marriages in 1975, 66.1% were first marriages for both the bride and bridegroom, 8.6% were first marriages for the brides only, 8% were first marriages for the bridegrooms only, and 17.2% were first marriages for neither.

Following the national trend, the number of divorces rose 7.6% to 5,504. Of these, 916 took place in Lancaster County.

"Couples married less than five years accounted for 43% of the total divorces, those married from five to nine years 26%, and those married 10 or more years 31%," the bureau reported.

All Lincoln Schools Will Be Ready For Classes

The smells of new paint and freshly cut lumber will greet students at some Lincoln public schools when they open their doors for the first day of classes August 30.

In spite of some construction delays, the schools will be ready for classes, according to Rudy Bauer, director of operations and maintenance for the system.

The big delay will be in completion of the joint city-school recreation facility at Irving Junior High, 22nd and Van Dorn. It will be late October or early November before physical education classes can use the $1.1 million complex, he speculated.

A new media center in the basement of Lincoln High will be ready, but other work on the structure will be in progress for about a month, he added.

Stairways, installation of an elevator and air conditioning, a weight room and locker rooms will have to be completed. Most of the roof and all of the windows are also being replaced, Bauer said.

Conversion of a corridor and two counselor's offices at Zeman School into two classrooms will be done in time for classes. Remodeling at Calvert, Hawthorne, Prescott and Northeast High will be in final stages when school opens, Bauer added.

"All of the buildings will be usable. We won't have to delay the opening of any of them," he said.

Library Service To Be Cut If Budgets Are Trimmed

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Library services in Lancaster County and Lincoln will have to be curtailed if proposed library budgets are substantially cut on either the city or county level, Lincoln City Libraries (LCL) President Paul Ess says.

The most immediate effects of the budget cuts would be felt by LCL staffers whose jobs would be eliminated because they are no longer affordable.

Also, library patrons may find some of the facilities closed on days they usually are open; there could be restrictions on future purchases of books and other library materials; library-goers may even notice longer lines at the lending desk due to personnel reductions; and use of the bookmobile may have to be discontinued

Because the City Council must keep its general operating fund within the city's mill levy limit, council members recently requested three budget cut plans — one to cut $500,000 from the total city budget, another slicing $1 million (the favored plan) and a third to reduce the total budget by $1.5 million.

LCL's current operating budget is $1,378,900 and its initially requested city budget for fiscal year 1976-77 was $1,461,193.

The library board tentatively has opted for shorter hours rather than severely curtailed services because when "the library is open for service, it should be staffed to meet the public demand for that service," LCL Director Charles Dalrymple said.

"We haven't determined what hours should be in neighborhood and branch libraries," he added. "It could either be a reduction of morning hours or we might not open any of them until 2 p.m.

He added the main library may be closed one whole day or two half days during the week.

Dalrymple said cutting the purchase of new books is detrimental to the entire library system. "The minute we cease keeping new books on the shelf, that is a step backwards."

The library budget story is a little different on the county level.

There is a separate tax levied for the support of library service in the county and so the library's budget does not fall into the county's general operating budget fund, Dalrymple said.

Whether or not LCL gets all or most of its proposed $146,000 for county services depends to a large degree on the interest and support of county residents now receiving library services.

If the county board terminated its contract with LCL, "we would have no alternative but to institute a fee system to all county residents" desiring continued service, Dalrymple said. Consequently, county residents would have to pay at least $10 a year.

Such existing programs as the popular Mail-A-Book program may have to be eliminated, he added.

Serving the Lincoln public since 1877, LCL has grown to include one main branck (Bennett Martin Public Library in downtown Lincoln), six branch libraries, two minilibraries and one bookmobile. Since 1960, LCL also has provided library services to Lancaster County residents living outside the Lincoln city limits.

"The original budget proposals for the operation of the library system in the city as well as the county was geared to maintain the present program at its current level," Ess said. "The budget was not inflated in any way to accelerate the program this year.

Fewer Firemen Called Danger

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

By proposing the elimination of the jobs of 12 firemen, the City Council is jeopardizing the safety of citizens and firemen, the president of the fire fighters union said Wednesday.

Hobart Boswell, president of Local 644 of the International Association of Fire Fighters, said the proposed reduction means that on three-man crews a fireman will have to enter burning homes by himself.

The council has tenatively approved the $130,000 budget cut as an economy move. It means that crews on fire rigs will be three-man instead of four-man when there is absence because of sickness, injury, vacation or military leave.

When a three-man crew answers a fire alarm, according to Boswell, one man drops off at the hydrant to attach the hose.

The driver operates the water pumps on the truck. That leaves one person to enter the home, Boswell said.

"Of course you've got other units on the way," Boswell said. "But in a fire the first few minutes are the most important. "That's when lives are saved and lives are lost."

Boswell said that fire fighters are trying to assemble information from other cities in which the number of fire fighters was reduced to present to the council during a budget hearing next Tuesday evening.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said that under the proposed budget cuts fire rigs will be manned by full four-man crews only about 70% of the time.

Currently, he said, the rigs have four-man crews about 96% of the time.

"I don't like it," Johnson said of the proposed cut. "But I respect them for the desire to cut expenses and hold the line."

Library Service To Be Cut If Budgets Are Trimmed

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Library services in Lancaster County and Lincoln will have to be curtailed if proposed library budgets are substantially cut on either the city or county level, Lincoln City Libraries (LCL) President Paul Ess says.

The most immediate effects of the budget cuts would be felt by LCL staffers whose jobs would be eliminated because they are no longer affordable.

Also, library patrons may find some of the facilities closed on days they usually are open; there could be restrictions on future purchases of books and other library materials; library-goers may even notice longer lines at the lending desk due to personnel reductions; and use of the bookmobile may have to be discontinued.

Because the City Councl must keep its general operating fund within the city's mill levy limit, council members recently requested three budget cut plans — one to cut $500,000 from the total city budget, another slicing $1 million (the favored plan) and a third to reduce the total budget by $1.5 million.

LCL's current operating budget is $1,378,900 and its initially requested city budget for fiscal year 1976-77 was $1,461,193.

The library board tentatively has opted for shorter hours rather than severely curtailed services because when "the library is open for service, it should be staffed to meet the public demand for that service," LCL Director Charles Dalrymple said.

"We haven't determined what hours should be in neighborhood and branch libraries," he added. "It could either be a reduction of morning hours or we might not open any of them until 2 p.m.

He added the main library may be closed one whole day or two half days during the week.

Dalrymple said cutting the purchase of new books is detrimental to the entire library system. "The minute we cease keeping new books on the shelf, that is a step backwards."

The library budget story is a little different on the county level.

There is a separate tax levied for the support of library service in the county and so the library's budget does not fall into the county's general operating budget fund, Dalrymple said.

Whether or not LCL gets all or most of its proposed $146,000 for county services depends to a large degree on the interest and support of county residents now receiving library services.

If the county board terminated its contract with LCL, "we would have no alternative but to institute a fee system to all county residents" desiring continued service, Dalrymple said. Consequently, county residents would have to pay at least $10 a year.

Such existing programs as the popular Mail-A-Book program may have to be eliminated, he added.

Serving the Lincoln public since 1877, LCL has grown to include one main branck (Bennett Martin Public Library in downtown Lincoln), six branch libraries, two minilibraries and one bookmobile. Since 1960, LCL also has provided library services to Lancaster County residents living outside the Lincoln city limits.

"The original budget proposals for the operation of the library system in the city as well as the county was geared to maintain the present program at its current level," Ess said. "The budget was not inflated in any way to accelerate the program this year.

Fewer Firemen Called Danger

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

By proposing the elimination of the jobs of 12 firemen, the City Council is jeopardizing the safety of citizens and firemen, the president of the fire fighters union said Wednesday.

Hobart Boswell, president of Local 644 of the International Association of Fire Fighters, said the proposed reduction means that on three-man crews a fireman will have to enter burning homes by himself.

The council has tenatively approved the $130,000 budget cut as an economy move. It means that crews on fire rigs will be three-man instead of four-man when there is absence because of sickness, injury, vacation or military leave.

When a three-man crew answers a fire alarm, according to Boswell, one man drops off at the hydrant to attach the hose.

The driver operates the water pumps on the truck. That leaves one person to enter the home, Boswell said.

"Of course you've got other units on the way," Boswell said. "But in a fire the first few minutes are the most important.

"That's when lives are saved and lives are lost."

Boswell said that fire fighters are trying to assemble information from other cities in which the number of fire fighters was reduced to present to the council during a budget hearing next Tuesday evening.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said that under the proposed budget cuts fire rigs will be manned by full four-man crews only about 70% of the time.

Currently, he said, the rigs have four-man crews about 96% of the time.

"I don't like it," Johnson said of the proposed cut. "But I respect them for the desire to cut expenses and hold the line."

Denial Of Nursing License Upheld

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday upheld the State Nursing Board's denial of a nursing license to a woman accused of unprofessional conduct.

In making that decision, the high court reversed a Lancaster County District Court's decision approving the license The State Court said the district court couldn't substitute its own judgment for that of an administrative board created by the Legislature

The case involved Hazel Scott who originally was licensed as a registered nurse in New York and had worked on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation before moving to Lincoln

When she applied for a license, the state Nursing Board refused to give her one on unprofessional conduct grounds While working under a temporary permit at Lincoln's Bethesda Hospital and two housing units, Mrs Scott refused to follow orders and failed to show up for work, the board charged

When Mrs Scott appealed the decision to the district court, that court reversed the board's findings

Although the evidence may have shown that Mrs Scott couldn't follow orders and/or get along with her fellow workers, the evidence fails to show that the conduct of the plaintiff constituted unprofessional conduct as it is generally defined," the district court said

The district court said a nursing license shouldn't be revoked "for trivial reasons or for a mere breach of the generally accepted ethics of the profession "

However, the State Supreme Court disagreed that the district court had the authority to substitute its own opinion for the nursing board

At the heart of the issue, the high court said, is the separation of powers between the judicial and legislative branches of government

The legislature has the authority to regulate health professions and has delegated that regulation to an administrative agency, the Nursing Board

Although the district court can review the board's decision, it can't substitute its own judgment, the Nebraska Supreme Court said

The Nursing Board, the court noted, is made up of working nurses and is thereby the best judge of professional conduct

A judge can only decide whether the Nursing Board acted within the scope of its statutory authority and whether the board's action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, the Supreme Court said

In other decisions handed down Wednesday, the court

— Reduced from $114 389 to $55 500 a Douglas County District Court bond and warrant sale fee dispute judgment against Dain Kalman & Quail Inc brought by Richard Hayes and the city of Omaha The bonds and warrants were on Sanitary and Improvement District 194

— Affirmed the Dodge County District Court s decision to dismiss a contract dispute filed by Vantage Enterprises Inc against Stanley Caldwell

Court: Fire Lieutenants, Captains Can Join Union

The City of Grand Island must allow fire captains and lieutenants to belong to the same union as firefighters, the Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Wednesday

In a 6-1 decision, the court upheld the State Court of Industrial Relation s decision allowing most supervisory personnel in the Grand Island Fire Department to join a union

The city had challenged the constitutionality of a state law which permitted captains and lieutenants to join the International Association of Fire Fighters No 647

The new law permitted firemen and policemen who are ' subordinate to the chief of the department and his immediate assistant or assistants to be included in the union with line personnel

Because of the change in the law the state court said it changed its previous decisions banning supervisory staff from joining a union

The court previously held that a conflict of interest would erupt between the supervisors duties and their union obligations should they be included in the same bargaining unit as subordinate employes

Grand Island city officials also hinted that union membership would be considered in future promotions, an action which caused the captains and lieutenants in the department to withdraw their union membership applications The State Supreme Court said such action was unlawful

The only justice disagreeing with the opinion was Judge Harry Spencer

Spencer agreed that the captains and lieutenants should be able to unionize, but said they should form their own union and not be permitted to join a union with the other employes

W. Lincoln Asks Park Relocation

Some west Lincoln residents have petitioned the city to change the site of a proposed neighborhood park, George Chick, Urban Development Department said Wednesday night.

The petition, which carries 159 signatures, states the site is not centrally located, that there are better areas for a park and that petitioners were not given a chance to express their preferences

The site for the park, between N W 1st St and N W 4th St. on either side of Nance Ave., has been approved by the City Council and some land has already been purchased with federal block grants Chick told about 50 persons attending a meeting of the West Lincoln Neighborhood Association

Chick said that since receiving the petition last week, the department has been studying an alternate site north of Belmont Ave near N W 8th St This site seems less desirable, he noted because it is inaccessible by road and has dangerous drop-offs

If no suitable location can be found the project may have to be abandoned, he explained

Some who signed the petition told him they had been led to believe a family would have to be relocated to make way for the park

Capitol Bugged; Solons Blamed

Although Nebraska state senators may not think there job is a picnic, their remains in the Capitol seem to indicate one. When the Legislature adjourned, uneaten candy and other food were left behind.

Now the Unicameral chamber is crawling with bugs. Legislative Council Executive Board Chairman Wally Barnett calls it a "case of cockroaches which needs immediate attention."

Maintenance crews have undertaken sweeping reforms to rid the pests.

Lincoln church news is carried on a special page in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

W. Lincoln Asks Park Relocation

Some west Lincoln residents have petitioned the city to change the site of a proposed neighborhood park, George Chick, Urban Development Department said Wednesday night.

The petition, which carries 159 signatures, states the site is not centrally located, that there are better areas for a park and that petitioners were not given a chance to express their preferences.

The site for the park, between N.W. 1st St. and N.W. 4th St. on either side of Nance Ave., has been approved by the City Council and some land has already been purchased with federal block grants, Chick told about 50 persons attending a meeting of the West Lincoln Neighborhood Association.

Chick said that since receiving the petition last week, the department has been studying an alternate site north of Belmont Ave. near N.W. 8th St. This site seems less desirable, he noted, because it is inaccessible by road and has dangerous drop-offs.

If no suitable location can be found, the project may have to be abandoned, he explained.

Some who signed the petition told him they had been led to believe a family would have to be relocated to make way for the park.

Capitol Bugged; Solons Blamed

Although Nebraska state senators may not think there job is a picnic, their remains in the Capitol seem to indicate one. When the Legislature adjourned, uneaten candy and other food were left behind.

Now the Unicameral chamber is crawling with bugs. Legislative Council Executive Board Chairman Wally Barnett calls it a "case of cockroaches which needs immediate attention."

Maintenance crews have undertaken sweeping reforms to rid the pests.

Playground Vision

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Tranquility Base Park is a field — and six visions set down in ink and balsa wood, baby's breath and clay.

It is a gleam in the neighborhood's eye and a grade for four semester hours of hard work.

Tranquility Base Park in north Lincoln is a merging of needs — a neighborhood's need for inexpensive help in designing a park and university student's need for a real project to work on.

The merger started when Mrs. Murray Johnson, 4600 Colfax Circle, decided the time had come for the field set aside by the area developer to be turned into the promised park.

If someone didn't get started soon, Mrs. Johnson reasoned, it would be too late for her 12-year-old son to enjoy the park.

A private, non-profit group of homeowners, Tranquility Base, Inc., was formed and Mrs. Johnson, secretary of the board, began searching for inexpensive ways to build the park.

The search led to the Community Development Department at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's School of Architecture, and from there, to Dr. Brian Sumption, UNL assistant professor of architecutre.

Designing the park would be a good practical problem for junior architecture students in the architectural design class, a class which usually has to make do with imaginary projects.

This summer, the 18 students in the eight-week design class had something real to sink their novice teeth into.

The students spent six weeks on the project, analyzing the site at Colfax and N. 44th St — wind directions, traffic circulation, noise, views from inside and out. They surveyed the 32 families who will use the park, broke into six groups and put their design for the three-acre park onto paper.

The result — six different park designs and a two-hour presentation to the homeowners of Tranquility Base.

And the homeowners were surprised at the caliber and amount of work which had gone into their field.

"We expected to see something on paper .. . . . not this," siad Mrs. Johnson as she surveyed models of the future park, the video tape film on the playground equipment, the detailed planning right down to the kind of trees to plant (evergreens) on the north to shield the area from harsh winds.

"It was fantastic. We couldn't have afforded to use an architect for this kind of work," she said.

And work it was. Members of one group estimated that they spent close to 100 hours just building the model of the park; more than 12 hours on the playground alone and up to a half hour on each of the clay children.

The architecture students, handicapped by their inexperience, spent hours searching for the right model materials — weeds from a parking lot, fake trees from nurseries, rubber hose and a razor to make the tire swings.

The initial site analysis filled a three-inch stack of papers. Before all the problems were solved in designing the park the students were knee deep in library books.

But all this work would have been necessary for any project in this design class. What made the difference was dealing with a real situation, real people and real problems, several students said.

"We knew that this was actually going to be built," said Michael Rand of Ft. Collins, Colo.

"In the imaginary process we never talk to a client. This way we get a real feel for that part of the job. Even the presentation for the neighborhood group was a lesson in reality," said Steve Haave of Albion.

Some of the students felt they put a little more effort into the project because "we actually knew it was going to be built."

And built it will be. After listening to the student presentations and viewing the models, the community group selected one overall design and playground equipment from another design.

The community group hopes to begin the sandlot, playground and baseball diamond areas of their park this summer. Other phases, including tennis courts, will have to await more time and money.

Kentucky Man Invents Special Clock For Blind

Frankfort, Ky. (UPI) — A Frankfort man, blinded by glaucoma when he was 9 years old, has invented an electronic braille "audio-tactile" clock to help other blind persons tell time through their fingertips.

As the blind person runs his fingers along the columns of metallic braille symbols on a six-by-seven-inch copperplate clock face, the symbol for the correct time digit in each column emits a tiny "beep."

The beep is caused as the finger closes the circuit beneath the symbol.

For instance, if the time is 10:57, the one in the first column, which contains only zero and one, beeps; the zero in the second column, the five in the third column and the seven in the fourth all beep in turn when touched.

Inventor T. V. Cranmer, 51, said, "when you touch a character that's active in the braille columns you can immediately tell the hours, minutes and seconds by touch. If you examine the seconds column, you can observe that the electronic signal is moving and actually observe time as it passes."

He said the invention will be particularly helpful to blind persons who must keep accurate logs of time in their work, such as emergency vehicle dispatchers, taxi-cab dispatchers and others.

Cranmer, director of technical services in the Kentucky Division of Services for the Blind, said he always has been fascinated by electronics. "I thought about this method of developing an electronic clock for the blind for some time, and had been trying to work out a system to display digital data. Finally it came to me about 3 or 4 one morning to use integrated circuits," he said.

"This couldn't have been done even as short a period as a few years ago," Cranmer added, "but recent developments in electronics research have made it possible."

He said the clock, which is battery operated and has no moving parts, is accurate to within a few seconds a week.

"I've done most of the conceptualizing and Dean Blaise, a local engineer and civilian employe with the U.S. Army, translated my thoughts into reality at night in his home basement workshop," Cranmer said.

He said eventually he hopes to have the copper clock face gold plated for appearance sake. "I've applied for a patent with the U.S. patent office at Washington," he added.

Credit Vs. Cash

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

In some parts of the country merchants are trying to get customers to resist the urge to say, "charge it!" by offering discounts on cash purchases.

In Lincoln, however, most retailers still are content to let their customers charge right through.

On the East and West Coasts, particulary, shopkeepers will offer discounts of up to 5% if the customer comes up with the long green instead of the short card. Until recently, most bank card companies, like Master Charge and BankAmericard, had provisions in their contracts prohibiting such practices.

The Fai. Credit Billing Act of 1975 changed all that.

The theory behind such discounts is the merchant is spared the charge — 1 to 5% — assessed by the bahk card company when the customer pays cash. Therefore, the merchant can offer that discount to the customer as an incentive toward buying.

Most Lincoln merchants, however, are not thinking of implementing such a plan. They say a dual billing system would be too costly and confusing, and that credit cards help stimulate impulse buying among customers who are considering large purchases.

One merchant who plans to offer discounts for cash purchases is Fred Wilson, of Fred Wilson Jewelers, 1342 O St. He said the number of bank card sales has increased sharply in recent years, and the transaction charge costs him anywhere from 2½% to 5% on an item.

Wilson said he will probably start a cash discount program in the fall. "I think if someone starts this in town, everyone else will have to do it, too," he said.

Other merchants sometimes offer a discount for cash if a customer tells them he could either charge or pay cash for an item.

Jim Rupert, manager of World Radio, 1321 O St., said if the customer asks for that sort of discount, his store will offer it. It doesn't matter to the merchant where that 3 or 4% goes because he doesn't get it anyway, Rupert said.

Most large stores in Lincoln are not considering a discount for cash because their main credit card sales are not through bank cards.

Brandeis, Sears, J.C. Penney and Montgomery Ward have their own credit cards. Miller and Paine and many local stores honor Nebraska Card. Because of this, they do not pay a transaction charge for credit card purchases.

Other independent merchants say the convenience of bank cards for the customer far outweighs the slight charge.

Ivan McPherson, manager of College Furniture Mart, 5221 S. 48th, said his store's usual charge on a credit card purchase is around 1%. "We're only talking about $3 on a $300 purchase," he said, adding that such a small amount is little incentive to a customer when closing a sale.

Don Hamann, of Sartor Hamann Jewelers, noted that cash carries a danger that credit cards do not. Bad checks are on the increase, he said, and a lot of merchants are leery of accepting checks. Bank cards can be checked at the time of the sale and the merchant is guaranteed of receiving payment.

Town's Marshal Is A Woman, But She Can Really Do The Job

Superior, Wyo. (UPI) — A few weeks ago a gang of whisky-drinking coal miners got rowdy at the ghost town bar and someone telephoned Marshal Bert Grotta. She came right over.

The bartender leaned over the polished wood bar and whispered that he knew a couple of the men were carrying pistols. The miners sat at a corner table, enjoying a big laugh over the lady marshal.

"Two of the guys were pretty drunk, and one took out a knife saying he would cut me up into little pieces," she said.

"Now, I'm too young to die, and I didn't want to mess with the guns. I just listened for a while and walked out."

She called nearby Rock Springs. A short time later the county sheriff and a highway patrolman walked into the bar carrying shotguns. The miners lost their sense of humor and went to jail peaceably.

Bertha Grotta is 23, stands 5-5 and weighs 125 pounds. She prefers to be called Bert.

Anyway you look at it she's a pretty small package of law enforcement, and the only woman in Wyoming to handle an entire town by herself. Women officers are common in Wyoming, but most agencies require applicants to be at least 5-9 and 165 pounds.

Bert studied criminal justice at Miramar College in San Diego, Calif. She worked two years as a security guard at the San Diego sports arena. Her toughest job there was throwing an unruly drunk out of an arena bar.

"I tackled him," Bert said proudly. "They wanted him thrown out and he didn't want to leave so I tackled him. He was embarrassed when I took him down to the security office."

She applied to the San Diego Police Department and was put on a long waiting list. While vacationing at her parents' home in Superior, a family friend told her the town needed a marshal.

Another guy also applied for the job. I wasn't sure I'd get it, but they said I was more qualified," said Bert. She became the town's first woman marshal.

Superior is a sleepy little mining town of about 300 residents in southwestern Wyoming's Red Desert. The two bars, a firehouse, a gas station, a grocery and the town hall make up just about the entire downtown area.

Five days a week Bert pulls on her blue jeans and hiking boots, slips into a blue uniform shirt with a shiny silver badge pinned above the left pocket, straps on a .357 magnum and climbs into her patrol car to make the rounds.

"I wanted to be a cop since I was a teenager," she said. "I thought it would be kinda neat. A lotta people say they wish they could do this or that, but nobody does. I like this job."

Aside from an occasional bar brawl, Bert's only had one problem since pinning on her badge. A drunken husband threatened to shoot her for interfering in a domestic quarrel.

"This guy got drunk and got in an argument with his wife. He had a loaded .22 pistol in the house and threatened to shoot me. I took off and called for a backup from Rock Springs. The sheriff drove over, handcuffed him and took the guy away. He apologized to me the next day."

Can she handle the physical end of being a cop? Is she tough enough?

"Well, not really," she said. "Just when I get mad."

'Musa Dagh' Is Planned Once More

Los Angeles (AP) — "The 40 Days of Musa Dagh," a film project at MGM studios for 40 years, may finally reach the screen.

The Franz Werfel novel about the resistance of Armenians against Turkish attack in World War I was bought by MGM after the book's publication in 1933. Efforts to film the story were abandoned several times, reportedly because of pressure from the Turkish government.

Now a new generation of MGM executives has scheduled "Musa Dagh" as a film to be produced by James B. Harris. British writer Ronald Harwood has been assigned to adapt the Werfel novel.

Scales Take New Turn

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — If Phil Driscoll's plans pan out, we'll all be plugging in our bathroom scales in a few years.

The same kind of electronic technology that has revolutionized the calculator and the watch industries is starting to seep into the scal industry.

Driscoll has a hand in the movement as vice president for market development of the Brearly Co. of Rockford, Ill. Brearly, which markets its products under the Conselor brand name, is the nation's largest maker of bathroom scales.

The company is introducing a solid-state electronic digital scale. Although it isn't the first electronic scale on the market, Brearly's position in the industry makes it the most important.

At a suggested retail price of about $300, however, the Counselor electronic scale isn't going to grace every bathroom in the country.

"This product is really aimed at the beam-scale market," Driscoll said.

The new pedestal scale can compete with beam scales because it is accurate to two-tenths of a pound. Bathroom springs scales may be off by two or three pounds.

The new unit can be operated by disposable batteries, rechargeable batteries or line cord. It also gives the weight in either pounds or kilograms at the flick of a switch.

Besides the health trade, the company also will arrange for consumer distribution through department and specialty stores in major urban areas.

But as with the electronic caluclators and digital watches, Driscoll expects prices to drop rapidly. By next year, Brearly will offer a digital bathroom scale for less than $50.

With a commanding 50% of the 6 million or so bathroom scales sold annually, Driscoll feels that "we probably have all of the bathroom business we're going to get."

Credit Vs. Cash

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

In some parts of the country merchants are trying to get customers to resist the urge to say, "charge it!" by offering discounts on cash purchases.

In Lincoln, however, most retailers still are content to let their customers charge right through.

On the East and West Coasts, particulary, shopkeepers will offer discounts of up to 5% if the customer comes up with the long green instead of the short card. Until recently, most bank card companies, like Master Charge and BankAmericard, had provisions in their contracts prohibiting such practices.

The Fair Credit Billing Act of 1975 changed all that.

The theory behind such discounts is the merchant is spared the charge — 1 to 5% — assessed by the bank card company when the customer pays cash. Therefore, the merchant can offer that discount to the customer as an incentive toward buying.

Most Lincoln merchants, however, are not thinking of implementing such a plan. They say a dual billing system would be too costly and confusing, and that credit cards help stimulate impulse buying among customers who are considering large purchases.

One merchant who plans to offer discounts for cash purchases is Fred Wilson, of Fred Wilson Jewelers, 1342 O St. He said the number of bank card sales has increased sharply in recent years, and the transaction charge costs him anywhere from 2½% to 5% on an item.

Wilson said he will probably start a cash discount program in the fall. "I think if someone starts this in town, everyone else will have to do it, too," he said.

Other merchants sometimes offer a discount for cash if a customer tells them he could either charge or pay cash for an item.

Jim Rupert, manager of World Radio, 1321 O St., said if the customer asks for that sort of discount, his store will offer it. It doesn't matter to the merchant where that 3 or 4% goes because he doesn't get it anyway, Rupert said.

Most large stores in Lincoln are not considering a discount for cash because their main credit card sales are not through bank cards.

Brandeis, Sears, J.C. Penney and Montgomery Ward have their own credit cards. Miller and Paine and many local stores honor Nebraska Card. Because of this, they do not pay a transaction charge for credit card purchases.

Other independent merchants say the convenience of bank cards for the customer far outweighs the slight charge.

Ivan McPherson, manager of College Furniture Mart, 5221 S. 48th, said his store's usual charge on a credit card purchase is around 1%. "We're only talking about $3 on a $300 purchase," he said, adding that such a small amount is little incentive to a customer when closing a sale.

Don Hamann, of Sartor Hamann Jewelers, noted that cash carries a danger that credit cards do not. Bad checks are on the increase, he said, and a lot of merchants are leery of accepting checks. Bank cards can be checked at the time of the sale and the merchant is guaranteed of receiving payment.

Town's Marshal Is A Woman, But She Can Really Do The Job

Superior, Wyo. (UPI) — A few weeks ago a gang of whisky-drinking coal miners got rowdy at the ghost town bar and someone telephoned Marshal Bert Grotta. She came right over.

The bartender leaned over the polished wood bar and whispered that he knew a couple of the men were carrying pistols. The miners sat at a corner table, enjoying a big laugh over the lady marshal.

"Two of the guys were pretty drunk, and one took out a knife saying he would cut me up into little pieces," she said.

"Now, I'm too young to die, and I didn't want to mess with the guns. I just listened for a while and walked out."

She called nearby Rock Springs. A short time later the county sheriff and a highway patrolman walked into the bar carrying shotguns. The miners lost their sense of humor and went to jail peaceably.

Bertha Grotta is 23, stands 5-5 and weighs 125 pounds. She prefers to be called Bert.

Anyway you look at it she's a pretty small package of law enforcement, and the only woman in Wyoming to handle an entire town by herself. Women officers are common in Wyoming, but most agencies require applicants to be at least 5-9 and 165 pounds.

Bert studied criminal justice at Miramar College in San Diego, Calif. She worked two years as a security guard at the San Diego sports arena. Her toughest job there was throwing an unruly drunk out of an arena bar.

"I tackled him," Bert said proudly. "They wanted him thrown out and he didn't want to leave so I tackled him. He was embarrassed when I took him down to the security office."

She applied to the San Diego Police Department and was put on a long waiting list. While vacationing at her parents' home in Superior, a family friend told her the town needed a marshal.

Another guy also applied for the job. I wasn't sure I'd get it, but they said I was more qualified," said Bert. She became the town's first woman marshal.

Superior is a sleepy little mining town of about 300 residents in southwestern Wyoming's Red Desert. The two bars, a firehouse, a gas station, a grocery and the town hall make up just about the entire downtown area.

Five days a week Bert pulls on her blue jeans and hiking boots, slips into a blue uniform shirt with a shiny silver badge pinned above the left pocket, straps on a .357 magnum and climbs into her patrol car to make the rounds.

"I wanted to be a cop since I was a teenager," she said. "I thought it would be kinda neat. A lotta people say they wish they could do this or that, but nobody does. I like this job."

Aside from an occasional bar brawl, Bert's only had one problem since pinning on her badge. A drunken husband threatened to shoot her for interfering in a domestic quarrel.

"This guy got drunk and got in an argument with his wife. He had a loaded .22 pistol in the house and threatened to shoot me. I took off and called for a backup from Rock Springs. The sheriff drove over, handcuffed him and took the guy away. He apologized to me the next day."

Can she handle the physical end of being a cop? Is she tough enough?

"Well, not really," she said. "Just when I get mad."

'Musa Dagh' Is Planned Once More

Los Angeles (AP) — "The 40 Days of Musa Dagh," a film project at MGM studios for 40 years, may finally reach the screen.

The Franz Werfel novel about the resistance of Armenians against Turkish attack in World War I was bought by MGM after the book's publication in 1933. Efforts to film the story were abandoned several times, reportedly because of pressure from the Turkish government.

Now a new generation of MGM executives has scheduled "Musa Dagh" as a film to be produced by James. B. Harris. British writer Ronald Harwood has been assigned to adapt the Werfel novel.

If The Food Smells, Speak Up Don't Throw Up

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to ask what she should do while dining at someone's home if the food doesn't smell right, and I couldn't believe your answer. (You told her not to mention it to the hostess — just "disguise" the food on the plate, and pretend to eat it.

Abby, how could you? Don't you know that if food smells bad (especially fish) it's spoiled and therefore poisonous?

As one who has suffered from seafood poisoning, I implore you to admit that your advice was wrong. Tell people to immediately inform the hostess that the food might be inedible.' It would be a kindness to the guests and certainly to the hostess.

If I were a hostess, I'd rather be forewarned than be responsible for poisoning my dinner guests.

DISSAPPOINTED IN YOU

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Back off! You didn't read that answer in MY column. I'd have said, "Tell your hostess at once. Speaking up beats throwing up!"

DEAR ABBY: Mike and I have been going steady for nine months, and one thing has been bothering me for a long time — his cheapness.

Yesterday we went to the beach, and on the way home we stopped for something to eat. Mike said he was broke and asked if I would mind paying for our lunches, so I did.

After lunch we stopped to gas up his car, and when Mike was paying for the gas, I saw two $10 bills and several singles in his wallet.

This isn't the first time this has happened. He has asked me to go to a movie and then asked me to pay for the tickets. He has only himself to support, so I can't understand it.

I work hard for my money and Mike knows it. He also works, but he doesn't spend any money on me unless he has to.

I don't want to break up with him because he's wonderful in many other ways, but this one fault bothers me. Any suggestions?

FEELING CHEATED

DEAR FEELING: If you don't want to break up with him, you'd better establish some ground rules about who pays for what.

Frankly, a man who pleads poverty so his girlfriend will pick up the tab sounds like a two-bit cheahskate to me. And cheapskates seldom change.

DEAR ABBY: I am a bachelor girl and in love for the first time in my life. The man is 29 and he's everything I've ever wanted in a husband. We met four months ago and have been together nearly every night since. Now he's talking marriage.

My birthday is coming up, and that's where my problem comes in. He doesn't know which birthday it is, and I have purposely avoided the subject.

I'll be 35 years old, but I'm sure he thinks I'm either his age or younger.

Should I tell him my age? I never actually lied about it — I just never mentioned it.

TO TELL OR NOT TO TELL

DEAR TO: Tell him! If it will make a difference in his feelings for you, you're better off knowing now.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who has a crush on a 15-year-old guy named Billy.

My problem is I don't know who Billy comes over here to see because I have a twin brother and an older brother who is 16, and when Billy comes over he is friendly with all of them.

Once he came over and spent the whole time talking to my mother while she did the ironing. I was in my room and he didn't even ask where I was.

I really like this guy, but I don't want him to know it. How can I find out for sure who Billy comes here so much to see?

LIKES BILLY

DEAR LIKES: If Billy is 15, I'd say the one he pays the least attention to is the one he comes to see.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♥	Pass	1♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	7♠

Opening lead - jack of clubs.

There are easy hands to play, and there are difficult hands to play. Here is one of the more difficult ones.

South gets to seven spades by unscientific bidding and West leads the jack of clubs. Declarer does not know how he will eventually fare, because the spades and hearts may both be divided unfavorably. However, it is clear that South should rely on dummy's hearts instead of trying to ruff his diamonds in dummy.

So let's say he wins the club lead with the ace, cashes the queen of spades, and plays a spade to the king, West showing out. South does not dare lead a third trump now because, if he does — and either opponent has four hearts — he is sure to go down one.

He therefore plays a heart to the ace and continues with the king, hoping nothing catastrophic will occur. Unfortunately, East ruffs the king of hearts and the grand slam goes down the drain.

Now let's back up to trick three, after declarer has played the ace of clubs and queen of spades, and have him cash the ace of hearts before leading a spade to the king.

This one play makes a big difference and, in fact, the contract is now ice-cold against any distribution. South then cashes dummy's king of clubs, discarding the king of hearts! He then ruffs a low heart, plays a spade to the ace, ruffs another low heart, and so makes the rest of the tricks.

The suggested method of play is clearly better than the one declarer actually followed. It caters not only to a 3-1 trump division, but also a 4-1 heart division, and is therefore the right line of play to adopt.

Psychologists Find Irritation, Depression Increase With Heat

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — If the dog days of summer leave you snarling at the kids, you're not alone.

Although air conditioning helps, two Johns Hopkins psychologists (both born in northern climes) have found that hot weather makes people more irritable, lethargic and depressed.

An opportune heat wave in Washington County, Md., during the dying days of August, 1973, gave the psychologists a chance to measure the psychic impact of hot weather.

The two had been conducting a long-term survey of the mental health of 65 residents of the community, employing a variety of standardized tests to measure aggression, depression, unhappiness and changes in activity.

When hot weather arrived, the rate of depression doubled from the norm, going from 14.6% to 30.8% of the population.

There were smaller increases in the proportion of persons reporting that they were feeling angry or had been in fights. Some 12.3% reported they were unhappy during the hot weather, twice the figure in less torrid times.

More than 25% of the survey respondents said they had to curtail their activities for at least one day in the week of the heat wave — compared with a normal rate of 15%.

That unhappiness and aggression were not more severe than the survey results showed could have resulted from the fact that the heat wave came late in the summer when people had become accustomed to warm weather, the two psychologists said.

Ballot Exclusion Brings Action Request

Grand Island (AP) — The Citizens Rights Protection Committee has asked Hall County Atty Sam Grimminger to take legal action against Grand Island City Clerk Richard Retallick for failing to place a proposed ordinance on the November ballot

The committee is chaired by Dave Glaze of Grand Island, and was formed to oppose the construction of a proposed power plant near Doniphan The plant is to be a joint venture involving both Grand Island and Hastings

The committee gathered signatures on petitions asking the Grand Island City Counil to enact an ordinance prohibiting the city from participating in a construction project outside the area of its jurisdiction The petitions, which were filed July 9, ask that the issue be placed before the voters in November if the council fails to act on the proposed ordinance

The council voted to receive the petitions and placed them on file However, the panel, acting on the advice of City Atty Earl Ahlschwede, has not acted on the proposal

Ahlschwede said the passage of such an ordinance would be in violation of state law

Glaze said he believes the citizens of Grand Island have a right to govern themselves and to intervene when elected officials fail to do their job

Glaze said the committee feels the city must place the proposed ordinance on the ballot

In a letter to Grimminger, Glaze asked for an investigation of the council action or inaction on the petitions, and that charges be brought if wrongdoing is found

According to Glaze, state law says any city clerk who fails to perform his or her duty shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000

Omaha (UPI) — U S District Judge Robert V Denney said Wednesday the process of drug pushers turning young people into addicts was "about as bad as murder "

In an emotionally charged setting, Denney commented during sentencing five of 15 persons indicted by a federal grand jury last February in connection with a multi-million dollar drug operation between Omaha and California

Several of the defendants cried openly, and the wife of another, weeping profusely, cursed Denney and said "I'm going to kill him" as she left the courtroom

The judge noted drug pushers prey on "high school and grade school kids and make addicts out of them This is about as bad as murder "

"They (pushers) might as well carry a pistol and pull the trigger," the judge added "If we're ever going to put a stop to this, we're going to have to do it in the courts "

Denney sentenced one of two ringleaders in the case, Steven Baker, 30, of the Los Angeles, Calif , area to eight years in prison when he could have given Baker a maximum of 15 years Baker had pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute controlled substances

Denney said in giving Baker the eight year sentence he was being "just as lenient as I can be I don't know what else I can do to help you '

In pressing for a stiff sentence, Asst U S Atty Thomas Thalken said "numerous people" in the Omaha area had their "lives messed up because of this individual "

Thalken told UPI after the sentencings that one of Baker's contacts in Omaha sold 2 5 million to 3 million amphetamines alone from the spring to fall of 1974

Denney sentenced Debra Bell, 22, of Los Angeles, to five years probation, her brother, James, 24, of Los Angeles, to three years in prison, Christopher Anderson, 21, of Pacific Junction, Iowa, to four years and six months probation with 48 days to be served in jail on weekends, and Jeffrey Mahlberg, 21, of Omaha to two years probation on a two year suspended prison sentence

Supervisors, Kelly Will Discuss County's Property Tax Problem

Grand Island (AP) — The Hall County Board of Supervisors has agreed to set up a meeting with Grand Island State Sen Ralph Kelly to discuss problems in collecting delinquent personal property taxes and the possibility of legislation to remedy the situation

Deputy Sheriff Duane Henn appeared before the board Tuesday, saying the county may have lost from $30,000 to $40,000 in personal property tax revenue over the past five years because some cattle fed commercially within the county are owned by persons or companies located outside the county

Henn said officials are barred from going outside the county to levy on property which has been removed from the county

Henn explained that cattle coming into the county may be fed and shipped out for slaughter before the personal property taxes become due, and there is no way to levy taxes against the animals once they leave the county

Henn said there is no system to let county officials know when fed cattle leave the county

Ballot Exclusion Brings Action Request

Grand Island (AP) — The Citizens Rights Protection Committee has asked Hall County Atty. Sam Grimminger to take legal action against Grand Island City Clerk Richard Retallick for failing to place a proposed ordinance on the November ballot.

The committee is chaired by Dave Glaze of Grand Island, and was formed to oppose the construction of a proposed power plant near Doniphan. The plant is to be a joint venture involving both Grand Island and Hastings.

The committee gathered signatures on petitions asking the Grand Island City Counil to enact an ordinance prohibiting the city from participating in a construction project outside the area of its jurisdiction. The petitions, which were filed July 9, ask that the issue be placed before the voters in November if the council fails to act on the proposed ordinance.

The council voted to receive the petitions and placed them on file. However, the panel, acting on the advice of City Atty. Earl Ahlschwede, has not acted on the proposal.

Ahlschwede said the passage of such an ordinance would be in violation of state law.

Glaze said he believes the citizens of Grand Island have a right to govern themselves and to intervene when elected officials fail to do their job.

Glaze said the committee feels the city must place the proposed ordinance on the ballot.

In a letter to Grimminger, Glaze asked for an investigation of the council action or inaction on the petitions, and that charges be brought if wrongdoing is found.

According to Glaze, state law says any city clerk who fails to perform his or her duty shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000.

Firing Of Unwed, Pregnant Teacher Upheld

Omaha (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom has upheld the right of the Omaha Board of Education to fire an unmarried school teacher who became pregnant, but questioned whether the board followed due process in doing so.

Urbom said, however, the due process question was a secondary issue in the case Barbara Jean Brown, a former teacher at Monroe Junior High School, filed against the school district on May 23, 1975, about two years after she was terminated.

The case was argued before Urbom in Omaha July 27 and 27.

Ms. Brown was seeking reinstatement to her job, back pay and benefits, $25,000 in damages, the removal of unfavorable comments on the situation from her job records and whatever other damages the court felt warranted.

"Fully considered," Urbom said, "I conclude that the interests of the plaintiff in determining her own familiar relationships and associating with whom she chooses do not outweigh the interests of the school in providing the kind of teachers it chooses for imparting social values and educational subject matter to junior high school students."

In his ruling filed Tuesday, Nebraska's chief federal judge concluded evidence in the case was "persuasive" that a junior high school teacher who develops a good relationship with the students "is likely to be a model to those students in wide-ranging respects, including personal values."

Urbom said Ms. Brown had developed such a relationship with the students.

Many students knew, the judge said, she was not married, and some of them by April of 1973 had observed she was probably pregnant and some had asked her about it, but she had given them no definite answer.

Under those circumstances, Urbom said the Omaha Board of Education was within the "realm of propriety" in considering that permitting Ms. Brown to continue to teach would be viewed by the students as an endorsement by Ms. Brown and the school board of pregnancy out of wedlock.

"There is a rational connection between the plaintiff's pregnancy out of wedlock," Urbom said, "and the school board's interest in conserving marital values, when acts probably destructive of those values are revealed, verbally or nonverbally, in the classroom."

Ms. Brown was seeking to have declared unconstitutional a portion of the Nebraska Teachers' Tenure Law giving some school districts, including Omaha, the right to terminate a contract on grounds of immorality.

However, Urbom said that statute applied only to teachers with regular or "indefinite contracts" instead of contracts given to employes such as Ms. Brown during their probationary period which generally is the first three years fo employment.

Urbom said the applicable statute in question was the "common law of Nebraska."

On the due process issue, Urbom said school district officials did not inform Ms. Brown she had a right to a hearing on her contract termination if she were to request one and "nothing in the evidence indicates that she thought she had to make a request."

". . . If a board puts a condition — the necessity of a request — upon a right to a hearing, it at least should let the teacher know of the condition," the judge said, adding, however, that school district officials and board members "had no reason to know that in 1973."

"No court, as far as I can tell," Urbom said, "had held that a school board had to give a hearing in the absence of a request."

Urbom noted the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission in 1973 found there had been sex discrimination by the school district against Ms. Brown. Douglas County District Judge John Burke then ordered the school board to give Ms. Brown a hearing which was held last September.

The school board reaffirmed its 1973 action terminating Ms. Brown, and Burke subsequently reversed the state Equal Opportunity Commission's finding of sex discrimination.

There was no appeal.

Armyworms Invade Corn Fields

Armyworms invaded many of Nebraska's corn fields during the past week, Bob Roselle, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension entomologist, said Wednesday.

He said reports indicate heavy feeding on lower leaves of corn, especially in central and northeast Nebraska counties. Armyworms also feed on silks, he said.

Damage to corn in good growing condition usually is not severe until armyworms have stripped the leaves below the ears prior to the corn dent stage, Roselle said.

He said armyworm outbreaks begin when moths deposit hundreds of eggs, usually on grasses. After grasses in corn are consumed, he said, the worms feed upward on corn leaves. The worms feed about three weeks.

FBI Seeks Omaha Rental Swindle Suspect

Omaha (AP) — Omaha-area authorities and the FBI are looking for a man who used an elaborate scheme to swindle area families out of an estimated $10,000 to $15,000 over the past two months.

Two felony charges of obtaining money under false pretenses have been filed against A.R. Jones, whose real name is Larry James Schultz, according to the FBI.

The FBI is looking for Schultz because he did not show up to begin serving a 15-month jail term after being convicted on federal fraud charges in California.

In the Omaha area, Schultz used the name of A.R. Jones, and rented out houses he didn't own, taking the rent and deposit money from unsuspecting families, then disappearing.

Investigators explained Schultz' method of operation:

Schultz, saying he represented a California firm, would agree to purchase a home from a local realtor.

He would make a small down payment, and would delay closing while demanding immediate possession.

Usually the homes involved were being sold for out-of-town owners.

When possession was granted, he would strip the homes of appliances and other items, apparently for resale, and he would show the homes to prospective renters.

He usually found renters through newspaper advertisements or rental agencies.

Schultz, who didn't care how large a family was or what pets they had, would promise his prospective tenants anything to get their rent money.

After taking the rent for the first month, and sometimes the last, along with a deposit and occasionally utility money, Schultz disappeared.

Douglas County authorities said they have received from 12 to 14 complaints about Schultz' activities.

Two Montana Rip-Offs Parallel Local Swindle

Lincoln's Richman Gordman store, which last week lost several thousand dollars in a successful extortion attempt, seems to be only one of three victims selected by an extortionist who is headed west.

Lincoln Assistant Police Chief Roger LaPage Wednesday said police in Billings, Mont., have reported two successful extortion attempts parallel to the Lincoln incident where Assistant Manager Larry Brown received a threatening call and followed the caller's orders.

An undetermined amount of cash was lost in the Monday night Billings rip-offs, LaPage said.

Chain stores were targeted in all three incidents, and a caller with a "southern drawl" claimed he was holding the store manager's family hostage.

Lincoln police are attempting to trace a suspect, LaPage said.

Few Seek Director Posts

State Sen. Loran Schmit, chairman of the Legislature's Agriculture and Environment Committee, Wednesday expressed concern about the low number of persons who have filed petitions with the Natural Resources Commission to become candidates for election to the board of directors of Nebraska's Natural Resource Districts.

Although 173 directors will be elected this year, as of Tuesday, there were 120 incumbents who had not refiled. The filing deadline is Aug. 10, and there are still 106 positions for which no one has filed.

Schmit said he is most concerned with the apparent lack of public knowledge regarding the elections. If no one is elected to fill a vacancy, the existing board of directors can appoint a new director.

The Natural Resource Districts have the power and responsibility to conserve and enhance all the state's natural resources. The directors also are responsible for the administration of local property tax money available to them as well as additional state and federal funds. During the 1975-76 fiscal year, the total budget for the Natural Resource Districts was $16,548,511 of which $5,244,734 was derived from property taxes.

Wheatgrowers To Take Action On Low Prices

The Nebraska Wheatgrowers Association will move soon to do something about the low prices they are receiving for wheat, says President Frank Johannsen of Bayard.

Johannsen said, "We have to do something to alert farmers to the fact that we are facing a 900 million-bushel carryover. That is two years' supply for the domestic market. We are producing more wheat than there is a demand for.

"What to do is a real question. A farmer could plant more forages but cattle prices are very poor. With cattlemen losing $100 a head it would appear that the feed grain producer will also be in trouble," he said.

"It would be a lot worse if there wasn't a drought in Europe and Australia. There are still good export prospects that can help," he said.

"Farmers have moved a lot of wheat into storage at inland terminals but they still own most of it. If they sell it slowly and carry over the surplus grain, they still might get their cost of production," he said.

Johannsen said University of Nebraska experts estimate that it is costing farmers $3.25 to $3.50 to produce a bushel of wheat.

"With wheat bringing about $2.85 the farmers aren't selling any at all. You almost have to hold the wheat," he said.

SPF Officers Chosen At End Of Conference

Officers of the Nebraska SPF (specific pathogen free) swine accrediting agency were selected at the end of the group's two-day George A. Young Conference in Lincoln.

Richard Sorenson of Wayne was re-elected president, and Max Gemar of Sutton was chosen for his second term as vice president.

Firing Of Unwed, Pregnant Teacher Upheld

Omaha (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom has upheld the right of the Omaha Board of Education to fire an unmarried school teacher who became pregnant, but questioned whether the board followed due process in doing so.

Urbom said, however, the due process question was a secondary issue in the case Barbara Jean Brown, a former teacher at Monroe Junior High School, filed against the school district on May 23, 1975, about two years after she was terminated.

The case was argued before Urbom in Omaha July 27 and 27.

Ms. Brown was seeking reinstatement to her job, back pay and benefits, $25,000 in damages, the removal of unfavorable comments on the situation from her job records and whatever other damages the court felt warranted.

"Fully considered," Urbom said, "I conclude that the interests of the plaintiff in determining her own familiar relationships and associating with whom she chooses do not outweigh the interests of the school in providing the kind of teachers it chooses for imparting social values and educational subject matter to junior high school students."

In his ruling filed Tuesday, Nebraska's chief federal judge concluded evidence in the case was "persuasive" that a junior high school teacher who develops a good relationship with the students "is likely to be a model to those students in wide-ranging respects, including personal values."

Urbom said Ms. Brown had developed such a relationship with the students.

Many students knew, the judge said, she was not married, and some of them by April of 1973 had observed she was probably pregnant and some had asked her about it, but she had given them no definite answer.

Under those circumstances, Urbom said the Omaha Board of Education was within the "realm of propriety" in considering that permitting Ms. Brown to continue to teach would be viewed by the students as an endorsement by Ms. Brown and the school board of pregnancy out of wedlock.

"There is a rational connection between the plaintiff's pregnancy out of wedlock," Urbom said, "and the school board's interest in conserving marital values, when acts probably destructive of those values are revealed, verbally or nonverbally, in the classroom."

Ms. Brown was seeking to have declared unconstitutional a portion of the Nebraska Teachers' Tenure Law giving some school districts, including Omaha, the right to terminate a contract on grounds of immorality.

However, Urbom said that statute applied only to teachers with regular or "indefinite contracts" instead of contracts given to employes such as Ms. Brown during their probationary period which generally is the first three years fo employment.

Urbom said the applicable statute in question was the "common law of Nebraska."

On the due process issue, Urbom said school district officials did not inform Ms. Brown she had a right to a hearing on her contract termination if she were to request one and "nothing in the evidence indicates that she thought she had to make a request."

". . . If a board puts a condition — the necessity of a request — upon a right to a hearing, it at least should let the teacher know of the condition," the judge said, adding, however, that school district officials and board members "had no reason to know that in 1973."

"No court, as far as I can tell," Urbom said, "had held that a school board had to give a hearing in the absence of a request."

Urbom noted the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission in 1973 found there had been sex discrimination by the school district against Ms. Brown. Douglas County District Judge John Burke then ordered the school board to give Ms. Brown a hearing which was held last September.

The school board reaffirmed its 1973 action terminating Ms. Brown, and Burke subsequently reversed the state Equal Opportunity Commission's finding of sex discrimination.

There was no appeal.

Armyworms Invade Corn Fields

Armyworms invaded many of Nebraska's corn fields during the past week, Bob Roselle, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension entomologist, said Wednesday.

He said reports indicate heavy feeding on lower leaves of corn, especially in central and northeast Nebraska counties. Armyworms also feed on silks, he said.

Damage to corn in good growing condition usually is not severe until armyworms have stripped the leaves below the ears prior to the corn dent stage, Roselle said.

He said armyworm outbreaks begin when moths deposit hundreds of eggs, usually on grasses. After grasses in corn are consumed, he said, the worms feed upward on corn leaves. The worms feed about three weeks.

FBI Seeks Omaha Rental Swindle Suspect

Omaha (AP) — Omaha-area authorities and the FBI are looking for a man who used an elaborate scheme to swindle area families out of an estimated $10,000 to $15,000 over the past two months.

Two felony charges of obtaining money under false pretenses have been filed against A.R. Jones, whose real name is Larry James Schultz, according to the FBI.

The FBI is looking for Schultz because he did not show up to begin serving a 15-month jail term after being convicted on federal fraud charges in California.

In the Omaha area, Schultz used the name of A.R. Jones, and rented out houses he didn't own, taking the rent and deposit money from unsuspecting families, then disappearing.

Investigators explained Schultz' method of operation:

Schultz, saying he represented a California firm, would agree to purchase a home from a local realtor.

He would make a small down payment, and would delay closing while demanding immediate possession.

Usually the homes involved were being sold for out-of-town owners.

When possession was granted, he would strip the homes of appliances and other items, apparently for resale, and he would show the homes to prospective renters.

He usually found renters through newspaper advertisements or rental agencies.

Schultz, who didn't care how large a family was or what pets they had, would promise his prospective tenants anything to get their rent money.

After taking the rent for the first month, and sometimes the last, along with a deposit and occasionally utility money, Schultz disappeared.

Douglas County authorities said they have received from 12 to 14 complaints about Schultz' activities.

Laurel Garbage Turns Out Heat

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Laurel — Keeping the lid on garbage disposal can be just as big a problem in rural communities as it is in cities.

L J. Mallat, city administrator in the Cedar County community of Laurel, says that's why his town is helping pioneer a smokeless, odorless garbage burning unit.

"Farmers don't want to give up their land for landfills," he said. "And they don't want us to dig a hole and put garbage under their property either."

Environmental emission restrictions and the dangers of open burning were also factors in trying out the experimental Pyrolizer garbage disposer, Mallat said. And the potential of cheap energy from garbage has become a major added benefit.

Heat to Burn

"We think this is a more economical way of handling trash and rubbish," he said. "Plus there is a tremendous amount of heat going to waste in the process that we could use to heat water and run a turbine."

Laurel, population 1,009, has a municipal generating plant, he said, but the cut-off of natural gas and skyrocketing diesel fuel costs have just about made it impractical to operate.

However, Mallat sees an untapped energy source in the Pyrolizer.

The temperature in the dome of the unit reaches 1,500 degrees, Mallat said, more than enough to create steam to power generators or to be used directly as steam heat.

One of Seven

There are about six other experimental Pyrolizers in the U.S., Mallat said, and the unit in Laurel is small scale.

The disposal system basically consists of two 800 cubic foot pits with a moveable dome and stack which can be used over one pit while the other pit is being filled.

A small amount of diesel fuel is used to start the fire, which is then fanned by an electric blower.

"It's kind of like the after burner on a jet," Mallat explained. "It reburns the carbon. In simple words, it takes the smoke out of the smoke."

The unit is not used for all disposal in Laurel, he said, and it would take four or five pits of similar size to handle all the garbage at an estimated cost of $100,000

That would' include refinements Mallat sees as necessary, including a building to cover it, stronger walls in the pit to prevent warping, a shredder, a conveyor belt to move garbage and a vacuum system to clean the small amount of ash from the pit.

The unit has been in operation for a year and a half, he said, and more than 70 representatives from cities and counties in the state have come to view it.

"What everybody likes about it is the simplicity," he said. "There's very little upkeep, and I even kind of apologize sometimes because there's not more to it "

The unit is not mass produced, but Thompson Dehydrating Co. of Topeka, Kan , manufacturer of the Pyrolizer, has announced plans to establish a national sales headquarters for the unit in Omaha.

Omaha Residents Get New Senator

Residents of Omaha's 5th Legislative District have a new state senator.

Mrs. Bernice Labedz was sworn in Wednesday afternoon by Secretary of State Allen Beermann during a ceremony attended by other state officials, including Eugene T. Mahoney of Omaha.

Mahoney resigned from the legislative seat to accept a job as head of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Mrs. Labedz, who must file 335 signatures with Beermann by Aug 24 to get her name on the November ballot so she can run for a full term, said after taking the oath of office she felt "fantastic."

She said she planned to "work very, very hard" for both election to a full term and for legislation "beneficial" to the state if elected

Mahoney, whose term would have ended this year, said he personally would not like to run against Mrs. Labedz and added "I don't think there was a more knowledgable person" Gov J James Exon could have appointed to the job

Exon is on vacation this week and was not present

Of Mahoney, Mrs. Labedz said "he's a very hard act to follow."

Also present was Sen Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, the only other woman in the Unicameral.

Omaha Businessman Jailed On Weekends

Omaha (AP) — The former owner and president of an Omaha architecture firm, R. Bruce Widstrom, will be spending weekends in the Douglas County Jail for the next 15 weeks.

Widstrom, 52, who pleaded guilty to 17 counts in a 27-count indictment charging him with failing to properly deposit federal withholding taxes from his employes' paychecks, appeared Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney

It was the second time Widstrom was in court for the same thing He also pleaded guilty in the earlier case

Denney fined Widstrom $100 on each of the 17 counts, then sentenced him to serve 30 days in jail But the jail time will be served on the weekends to allow Widstrom to continue in his new job, Denney said.

Widstrom is also liable for the tax money owed to the Internal Revenue SErvice.

After Denney pronounced the sentence, he dismissed the remaining 10 counts in the indictment at the government's request

Zorinsky Plugs For More Private Investment In Downtown

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Edward Zorinsky said Wednesday more private financial commitments were necessary to develop downtown Omaha although a joint University of Nebraska-state office building would encourage activity and stimulate business in the Central Park mall area.

"It's no trick to take taxpayers' money and build buildings," zorinsky said

Zorinsky said demolition of buildings in a two-block area for the $14 million state structure could start next spring if the state approves the site for the facility

The city council voted 4-0 Tuesday to recommend a site bounded by Farnam, Harney, 12th and 14th Sts for the project, which is expected to take some two years to complete The old WOW Building, a landmark and once Omaha's tallest structure, is among the buildings to be demolished

The downtown education center-state office building is being financed by $9 million in government funds and $5 million from some 20 private donors.

Rescue Problem Near Omaha Eyed

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday formed a committee to study rescue squad response in unincorporated areas around Omaha, particularly those areas in close proximity to Omaha city fire stations.

The discussion resulted from an accident last Thursday at the intersection of Pacific Street and Regency Parkway. A 9-year-old Omaha girl suffered fatal injuries in a three-car crash that hospitalized five other persons.

Although an Omaha fire station was located four blocks away, a volunteer rescue unit was summoned from Irvington because the intersection is located in Douglas County, not the city. The volunteer units were summoned by sheriff's deputies from a distance of about five miles.

Omaha rescue units eventually responded but only after standard mutual aid procedures had been followed.

Douglas County Board Chairman Michael Albert said jurisdictional considerations should not take precedence over the saving of lives.

Omaha Fire Chief Vernon Van Scoy says the answers to the problem will not be easy to find and legislation would be required.

Van Scoy said there has never been a problem with the current mutual aid system

Omaha Council Approves Site For Ed Center

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council has voted 4-0 to recommend the combination downtown education center and state office building be located in two blocks between Farnam and Harney and 12th and 14th Sts

The council voted after Landmarks Inc tried to block the proposal. The organization, which encourages preservation of buildings with historical and cultural value, urged the council to delay action to see if a way can be found to save the old Woodmen of the World building.

The 18-story WOW building is scheduled for razing under the plans.

Council approval is one of several steps needed before ground can be broken for the $14 million education center-state office building.

The council's recommendation will be sent to the State Department of Administrative Services and State Building Commission for approval of the location.

The city is to act as the financial agent for the building, issuing revenue bonds for its construction, then repaying them later with lease-purchase payments received from the state.

The building is to be financed with $9 million from the revenue bond issue and $5 million from about 20 private donors.

Mrs. Bernice Labedz was sworn in Wednesday afternoon by Secretary of State Allen Beermann during a ceremony attended by other state officials, including Eugene T. Mahoney of Omaha.

Mahoney resigned from the legislative seat to accept a job as head of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Mrs. Labedz, who must file 335 signatures with Beermann by Aug. 24 to get her name on the November ballot so she can run for a full term, said after taking the oath of office she felt "fantastic."

She said she planned to "work very, very hard" for both election to a full term and for legislation "beneficial" to the state if elected.

Mahoney, whose term would have ended this year, said he personally would not like to run against Mrs. Labedz and added "I don't think there was a more knowledgable person" Gov. J. James Exon could have appointed to the job.

Exon is on vacation this week and was not present.

Of Mahoney, Mrs. Labedz said "he's a very hard act to follow."

Also present was Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, the only other woman in the Unicameral.

Omaha Businessman Jailed On Weekends

Omaha (AP) — The former owner and president of an Omaha architecture firm, R. Bruce Widstrom, will be spending weekends in the Douglas County Jail for the next 15 weeks.

Widstrom, 52, who pleaded guilty to 17 counts in a 27-count indictment charging him with failing to properly deposit federal withholding taxes from his employes' paychecks, appeared Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney.

It was the second time Widstrom was in court for the same thing. He also pleaded guilty in the earlier case.

Denney fined Widstrom $100 on each of the 17 counts, then sentenced him to serve 30 days in jail. But the jail time will be served on the weekends to allow Widstrom to continue in his new job, Denney said.

Widstrom is also liable for the tax money owed to the Internal Revenue SErvice.

After Denney pronounced the sentence, he dismissed the remaining 10 counts in the indictment at the government's request.

Rescue Problem Near Omaha Eyed

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board Tuesday formed a committee to study rescue squad response in unincorporated areas around Omaha, particularly those areas in close proximity to Omaha city fire stations.

The discussion resulted from an accident last Thursday at the intersection of Pacific Street and Regency Parkway. A 9-year-old Omaha girl suffered fatal injuries in a three-car crash that hospitalized five other persons.

Although an Omaha fire station was located four blocks away, a volunteer rescue unit was summoned from Irvington because the intersection is located in Douglas County, not the city. The volunteer units were summoned by sheriff's deputies from a distance of about five miles.

Omaha rescue units eventually responded but only after standard mutual aid procedures had been followed.

Douglas County Board Chairman Michael Albert said jurisdictional considerations should not take precedence over the saving of lives.

Omaha Fire Chief Vernon Van Scoy says the answers to the problem will not be easy to find and legislation would be required.

Van Scoy said there has never been a problem with the current mutual aid system.

Omaha Council Approves Site For Ed Center

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council has voted 4-0 to recommend the combination downtown education center and state office building be located in two blocks between Farnam and Harney and 12th and 14th Sts.

The council voted after Landmarks Inc. tried to block the proposal. The organization, which encourages preservation of buildings with historical and cultural value, urged the council to delay action to see if a way can be found to save the old Woodmen of the World building.

The 18-story WOW building is scheduled for razing under the plans.

Council approval is one of several steps needed before ground can be broken for the $14 million education center-state office building.

The council's recommendation will be sent to the State Department of Administrative Services and State Building Commission for approval of the location.

The city is to act as the financial agent for the building, issuing revenue bonds for its construction, then repaying them later with lease-purchase payments received from the state.

The building is to be financed with $9 million from the revenue bond issue and $5 million from about 20 private donors.

NU Med Center Professor Gets $30,000 Grant

A University of Nebraska professor has been awarded a one-year American Cancer Society renewal grant for $30,000 to continue his studies of Vitamin C and nitrosamides.

Dr. Sidney S. Mirvish, professor at UNO Medical Center's Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer, will continue his studies of the potential of Vitamin C to block formation of nitrosamides. These compounds can be chemically produced in the stomach by a combination of foods and other substances such as pesticides in amounts which Mirvish believes could be a cancer threat.

Researchers will test the cancer-causing ability of some new nitrosamides on rats. If the cancer-causing threat proves real, Vitamin C may prove to be a means of blocking formation of cancer cells.

Exon Advises Against Two Papio Dams

Gov J James Exon has asked a U S Senate subcommittee not to authorize building two dams in the Papio Valley, because their flood control benefits are suspect

Senate Bill 3640, to reauthorize the Papillion Creek and Tributaries Lakes Project, was heard before the Senate Water Resources Subcommittee Wednesday.

In a letter to Alaska Sen. Mike Gravel, panel chairman, Exon said, "Since the dams are flood control projects, the expenditure of millions of dollars of tax money can only be justified if it can be shown that flood control benefits will be provided."

That, Exon said, is why he supported establishing a review panel of independent engineers to analyze "the conflicting evidence" and offer "answers to the flood control benefit question "

The engineers unanimously agreed "that neither dams 3A nor 10 will come close to providing the amount of flood control which would justify their construction," and recommended against building them.

Dam 3A would be on the Big Papillion Creek near Bennington in Washington and Douglas Counties. Dam 10 would be on the Little Papillion near the Hwy. 36-133 junction in Douglas County.

"Unless the work of this blue ribbon panel can be shown to be faulty," the governor said, "their conclusions must be accepted "

Exon urged that Sen. Gravel's subcommittee recommend Papio Valley evaluations continue, to develop effective control methods for the "flood prone area "

The governor requested his letter be made part of the subcommittee hearing record, and sent the review board's summary report

Exon noted that earlier testimony given on his behalf before the Senate Public Works Committee expressed support for the review board, because evidence about the two dams in question indicated they wouldn't provide the control benefits promised to Omaha, Douglas and Sarpy Counties.

Anderson Questions Thone's Position

Democratic congressional nominee Pauline Anderson Wednesday questioned whether Rep Charles Thone is "afraid of democracy "

Thone's opposition to the proposed postcard voter registration law is "an insult to the intelligence and integrity of the American people, especially to his Nebraska constituents," the First District Democrat said.

The legislation is designed to "break down the many barriers" to public participation in the decision-making process, Mrs. Anderson said.

In other action, the Democratic nominee named a campaign strategy council to assist in her contest with Thone.

'We are proceeding from a simple premise," she said.

"Governor Carter will be the next president of the United States and he will need Democrats from every state to lend him strong support in carrying out major tax, economic, political, welfare, administrative and programmatic reforms at the national level."

Labor Election Ordered Held At Boys Town

Omaha (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board has ordered that an election be held at Boys Town in which teachers can decide whether they want to be represented by the Boys Town Education Assn. in future salary talks

The decision means Boys Town teachers apparently have won an 18-month fight to get the same kind of collective bargaining rights as public school teachers have.

A Boys Town official said no decision has been made on a possible appeal. Its position had been that it was a private, charitable institution not subject to NLRB regulations.

Dwain Pedersen, president of the Boys Town Education Assn., said he is certain the teachers will vote for collective bargaining

Those eligible to vote in the election, which will be held some time this month, include teachers, department chairmen, media personnel, librarians, coaches, counselors and others Pedersen said about 115 employes will be eligible to vote.

Market Retains Advance

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, faced with some late profit taking, held on to record its second advance in a row Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 4 points at mid-afternoon, closed with a 1.95 gain at 992.28.

The average had climbed 8.07 points on Tuesday.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 5-3 margin in the daily count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The confrontation between buyers and profit takers pushed Big Board volume to a three-week high of 20.65 million shares, up from 18.50 million Tuesday.

Brokers attributed strength early in the session to encouragement over Tuesday's rally and the dividend increase by General Motors that helped inspire it.

GM put its quarterly payout back at the 85 cents-a-share level it paid before the recession. In the last year and a half it had been paying 60 cents quarterly.

Among other autos, Chrysler also lost a fraction despite hopes that the company would reinstate its dividend Thursday, and Ford Motor was unchanged as of the NYSE close.

—Staying Ahead—

Pension May Be Smaller, Less Safe Than You Think

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Here are three ideas you probably have about your company or union pension plan which could be dead wrong (1) If you stay on the job, the plan will provide you with a decent retirement income. (2) You can count on the benefits promised being delivered. (3) If the plan goes broke, the new federal pension-insurance plan will see that you're paid.

Taking these notions in order.

(1) Some companies and unions do indeed have generous pension plans But others pay only minimal benefits. Few people pay any attention to the size of their pension, or how it's figured, until they're close to retirement — and then they may be shocked at the meager sum allowed Many retirees expecting big pension and Social Security payments are dismayed to learn that increases in Social Security may be deducted from pension payments, giving them no net benefit

Under the pension-reform law, your employer or union must give you a simple-English summary of your pension plan (by no later than next March), and once a year inform you of exactly what benefits you have coming Don't make any blind assumptions about the size of your payout! Check the plan in detail, and if it's stingy, you might try to switch employers while there's still time.

A word about job-hopping for pension benefits. Some managers consider it bad form for a person applying for work to inquire about medical and pension plans They figure you're nothing but a fringe-benefit drone, and go on to the next applicant

This attitude is foolish and unfair, but you have to deal with it. Best ways Check the fringes in advance, through a friend who already works there. Save the fringe-benefit questions for the personnel office, rather than the hiring executive. Or ask the executive about them last, and in a businesslike manner.

(2) Federal pension insurance does not cover reductions in the benefits of on-going plans. For example, a union could decide to eliminate medical benefits for pensioners (as some have), and there's no insurance to cover your loss. Normally, however, the size of a pensioner's basic check wouldn't be cut, because enough money to fund his pension would have been put in a private insurance plan at retirement.

Future pension checks for people not yet retired could be cut, however. Any plan curtailments would have to be reported to the Internal Revenue Service, but if there's a good business reason for the cutback, they'll be okayed. Loss of these expected benefits is not insured

(3) The majority of pensions are now insured by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGS). But a significant number are still without coverage.

Fraternal plans, with no employer contribution, are not included, as the International Typographical Union recently found when it applied for help. Plans involving several employers won't be covered until January 1, 1978. Two multi-employer plans requested early coverage — the Millinery Workers in New York City and the Milk Fund of New Jersey (Teamsters). But the PBGC hasn't yet decided whether it can afford the cost.

By law, PBGC covers only defined-benefit plans, where a worker is entitled to a specific payment at retirement based on such things as age and years of service. There's no coverage for profit-sharing or stock-option plans. If one of those goes broke, you're out of luck.

If your employer has recently shifted from a defined-benefit to a profit-sharing plan, take a close look at what benefits you're likely to get, and when. He might be trying to evade the strict vesting provisions now required for defined-benefit plans

Even with a defined benefit plan, bankruptcy could cost you some of the income you'd counted on. PBGC's current ceiling on payments is $869 a month, no matter how much more you were promised. Also, it won't replace any of your supplemental benefits. For example, you'd lose any promised medical and dental payments, cash supplements, education benefits and other fringes. Anyone under 65 and collecting on a "30-years-and-out" plan would have his payment reduced. Nor would you receive full payment on benefits added during the past five years.

Although some members of pension plans that went broke have received full payment from PBGC, others have had their incomes reduced by 50% or more.

In short, although pensions are a lot safer than they used to be, they still have a way to go before they're as secure as Social Security. Unforeseen circumstances can still knock your retirement plans into a cocked hat.

Gas, Oil Drilling Up

Tulsa (UPI) — Drilling for gas and oil is at a high level in western Canada, according to the Oil & Gas Journal. The industry publication says the average number of active rigs rose to 221 during the first quarter, a jump of 25% from the comparable period last year. Higher energy prices and improved exploration incentives were given as the reason for the increase.

Aragon's Oasis Invites Visitors

Madrid, Spain (UPI) — Amid the dry, rugged hills of Aragon lies an oasis of waterfalls, fresh streams, lush vegetation, caves and trees — the park of the Monasterio de Piedra (monastery of stone).

A walk along the park trail requires a minimum of 90 minutes and takes the visitor through misty grottos, by swift waterfalls and trout streams, and under spreading trees that sometimes block out the sun. Price of entry is 75 pesetas ($1.10).

Part of the monastery has been turned into a hotel.

Market Retains Advance

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, faced with some late profit taking, held on to record its second advance in a row Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 4 points at mid-afternoon, closed with a 1.95 gain at 992.28.

The average had climbed 8.07 points on Tuesday.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 5-3 margin in the daily count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The confrontation between buyers and profit takers pushed Big Board volume to a three-week high of 20.65 million shares, up from 18.50 million Tuesday.

Brokers attributed strength early in the session to encouragement over Tuesday's rally and the dividend increase by General Motors that helped inspire it.

GM put its quarterly payout back at the 85 cents-a-share level it paid before the recession. In the last year and a half it had been paying 60 cents quarterly.

Among other autos, Chrysler also lost a fraction despite hopes that the company would reinstate its dividend Thursday, and Ford Motor was unchanged as of the NYSE close.

Pension May Be Smaller, Less Safe Than You Think

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Here are three ideas you probably have about your company or union pension plan which could be dead wrong: (1) If you stay on the job, the plan will provide you with a decent retirement income. (2) You can count on the benefits promised being delivered. (3) If the plan goes broke, the new federal pension-insurance plan will see that you're paid.

Taking these notions in order:

(1) Some companies and unions do indeed have generous pension plans. But others pay only minimal benefits. Few people pay any attention to the size of their pension, or how it's figured, until they're close to retirement — and then they may be shocked at the meager sum allowed. Many retirees expecting big pension and Social Security payments are dismayed to learn that increases in Social Security may be deducted from pension payments, giving them no net benefit.

Under the pension-reform law, your employer or union must give you a simple-English summary of your pension plan (by no later than next March), and once a year inform you of exactly what benefits you have coming. Don't make any blind assumptions about the size of your payout! Check the plan in detail, and if it's stingy, you might try to switch employers while there's still time.

A word about job-hopping for pension benefits. Some managers consider it bad form for a person applying for work to inquire about medical and pension plans. They figure you're nothing but a fringe-benefit drone, and go on to the next applicant.

This attitude is foolish and unfair, but you have to deal with it. Best ways: Check the fringes in advance, through a friend who already works there. Save the fringe-benefit questions for the personnel office, rather than the hiring executive. Or ask the executive about them last, and in a businesslike manner.

(2) Federal pension insurance does not cover reductions in the benefits of on-going plans. For example, a union could decide to eliminate medical benefits for pensioners (as some have), and there's no insurance to cover your loss. Normally, however, the size of a pensioner's basic check wouldn't be cut, because enough money to fund his pension would have been put in a private insurance plan at retirement.

Future pension checks for people not yet retired could be cut, however. Any plan curtailments would have to be reported to the Internal Revenue Service, but if there's a good business reason for the cutback, they'll be okayed. Loss of these expected benefits is not insured.

(3) The majority of pensions are now insured by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGS). But a significant number are still without coverage.

Fraternal plans, with no employer contribution, are not included, as the International Typographical Union recently found when it applied for help. Plans involving several employers won't be covered until January 1, 1978. Two multi-employer plans requested early coverage — the Millinery Workers in New York City and the Milk Fund of New Jersey (Teamsters). But the PBGC hasn't yet decided whether it can afford the cost.

By law, PBGC covers only defined-benefit plans, where a worker is entitled to a specific payment at retirement based on such things as age and years of service. There's no coverage for profit-sharing or stock-option plans. If one of those goes broke, you're out of luck.

If your employer has recently shifted from a defined-benefit to a profit-sharing plan, take a close look at what benefits you're likely to get, and when. He might be trying to evade the strict vesting provisions now required for defined-benefit plans.

Even with a defined benefit plan, bankruptcy could cost you some of the income you'd counted on. PBGC's current ceiling on payments is $869 a month, no matter how much more you were promised. Also, it won't replace any of your supplemental benefits. For example, you'd lose any promised medical and dental payments, cash supplements, education benefits and other fringes. Anyone under 65 and collecting on a "30-years-and-out" plan would have his payment reduced. Nor would you receive full payment on benefits added during the past five years.

Although some members of pension plans that went broke have received full payment from PBGC, others have had their incomes reduced by 50% or more.

In short, although pensions are a lot safer than they used to be, they still have a way to go before they're as secure as Social Security. Unforeseen circumstances can still knock your retirement plans into a cocked hat.

Gas, Oil Drilling Up

Tulsa (UPI) — Drilling for gas and oil is at a high level in western Canada, according to the Oil & Gas Journal. The industry publication says the average number of active rigs rose to 221 during the first quarter, a jump of 25% from the comparable period last year. Higher energy prices and improved exploration incentives were given as the reason for the increase.

A walk along the park trail requires a minimum of 90 minutes and takes the visitor through misty grottos, by swift waterfalls and trout streams, and under spreading trees that sometimes block out the sun. Price of entry is 75 pesetas ($1.10).

Part of the monastery has been turned into a hotel.

Auditors Balk At Housing For Corrections Officials

By United Press International

State auditors have questioned the fact that some Nebraska Corrections Department officials pay only $25 a month for housing, it was learned Wednesday.

Joseph Vitek, corrections director, responded to the audit report by saying not only are the rates being reviewed on two houses and two duplexes located on corrections property, but so is the idea of providing any housing at all.

Also questioned in the audit report were seven dormitory rooms rented out for $10 a month

Vitek said since the audit was done, those rooms, previously reserved for bachelor guards, have been taken over for much needed office space.

Rates From 1966

The audit report said the monthly rates were set over 10 years ago and "the original intention for the rates appears to have been lost over the years." The report said utility costs alone have surpassed the monthly rates.

The two houses and two duplexes, located on farm property and Lincoln reformatory grounds, are in addition to housing provided by law to the warden and deputy warden.

Vitek does not live in state-provided housing but still carries with him a "beeper" so that he is in constant touch.

Vitek said the houses and duplexes are reserved for guard captains, lieutenants and assistant wardens whose immediate presence is required in the event of an emergency.

Trend Acknowledged

In calling for the review of whether to have them at all, as well as who gets them, Vitek said he fully recognized a trend away from providing housing and towards better communications, travel 24-hour staffing with fully qualified corrections "executives."

"We're talking here about something that began over 100 years ago," he said.

But Vitek said even with modern technology in travel and communications, "it can be of tremendous value to have someone nearby."

As an example, he cited a recent fire in a penitentiary cell at a time when the warden was not technically in his office but was close enough to order the release of all convicts in the cellblock to the prison yard. Only the warden has the authority to issue such a release order in a prison.

He also said despite the general trend, state institutions in Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana provide housing on institutional grounds for all staff members and federal institutions do the same thing.

Vitek said another thing being considered is state employe salaries in general. He said statisticians have concluded that state employes generally are losing the inflation battle because they do not receive the pay boosts that others do.

The Bus Will Go Around Corners

American Motors Corp. has announced that its subsidiary, AM General, has been awarded a $21.3 million contract to produce the first U.S. fleet of articulated diesel buses that will be delivered to the metropolitan Seattle transit authority, beginning in late 1977. Articulated buses have been widely used throughout Europe for some years, but so far as can be determined none are in use in the United States.

Suit Against School Board Is Dismissed

Lancaster County District Court Judge Hergert Robin Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit against board members of School District 107 because the board had agreed to make some changes in school expansion plans.

The people who filed the suit against the school board asked that the suit be dismissed.

At a special school board meeting Monday, the members agreed to change plans for expanding the school building from 825 square feet to 1,100 square feet. The school district is located west of Lincoln, near Lincoln Air Park West.

The plaintiffs in the action, Audrey and Robert Gilliam and David Zeilinger, charged that the school board violated the wishes of voters who approved a school bond issue to expand school facilities.

At Monday's special meeting, the school board agreed to have the construction finished by Sept. 26.

Candidates Not Lacking For NU President's Job

The candidates lining up for the University of Nebraska presidential slot now number around 75, with less than one week left before the application deadline.

The nationwide search, including advertising in the Chronicle of Higher Education, has brought in some nominations and quite a few applications, said Paul Schorr III, chairman of the search committee for the new president.

The committee was set up this summer after President D.B. Varner announced his intention to step down from the top university spot in January after five years as NU president.

The search committee has broken into three subcommittees to investigate the background and vitas (education lingo for resumes) of candidates, Schorr said.

The subcommittees will return with recommendations to the full committee and finally five to seven names will be sent to the Regents.

The Sept. 15 goal for the Regents report is probably a "very ambitious goal" because of the conflicting vacation schedules of search committee members, Schorr said.

Schorr said he did not wish to comment on whether any of the 75 individuals names now before the search committee include any current NU employe.

County Board Endorses City-County Merger Plan

Lancaster County commissioners have officially endorsed a legislative plan to merge county and city government.

The concept, recommended by the City-County Implementation Commission, calls for adoption of enabling legislation by the Legislature.

After passage of new laws, a countywide commission could be appointed to write a charter for the consolidated local government.

The merger concept already has been approved by the City-County Common, a group made up of the mayor, city council and county board.

The council is expected to add its official individual endorsement later this summer.

Patrol Commander Will Retire

Capt. Mel Busekist, Nebraska State Patrol troop commander at Scottsbluff, retires from the patrol Aug. 13 after 30 years of service, Col. C. P. Karthauser, patrol superintendent, announced Wednesday.

Busekist was appointed to the patrol June 17, 1946 and his duty stations included Gering, Sidney and Scottsbluff. He was assigned troop commander of the Scottsbluff District April 1, 1973.

Busekist is a native of Gretna, and will retire in Scottsbluff, Karthauser said.

Mills Brothers, James At Fair

The Mills Brothers and Harry James will join Peter Marshall in his show at the 1976 Nebraska State Fair. The Peter Marshall show will be Thursday, Sept. 9 at 8 p.m.

"Paper Doll" and "Cab Driver" are among the Mills Brothers' major hits. James has appeared in several musical motion pictures since he gained national popularity in the early 1940s.

Tipoff — 8 p.m., Mid-Plains College, North Platte

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

North Platte — Guard Chris Salerno may have the longest shooting range in the North all-star basketball camp.

But, North coach Ken Trubey says, facetiously, Salerno also "has the biggest bit in his mouth and the strongest arms hold him back."

Playing for Brother Mike Wilmot's highly disciplined Creighton Prep teams, Salerno probably felt like a handcuffed criminal the past three years.

Thursday night here at Mid-Plains Community College, that's all going to change. Salerno is trading in his conservatism.

He's been given the green light — freedom to shoot whenever he feels like it as the North meets the South in the first of two Nebraska Coaches Assn. all-star games. Game No. 2 is set for Friday night at Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium.

"Chris really likes the fact that we're a running ball club," Ord's Trubey says. "Of course, we've been impressed with him on both ends of the court. I don't think he realized his own firepower."

Salerno, who will attend Hutchinson (Kan.) Junior College, triggers the North's fast break. "He's really learned the little things of a fast break," Trubey says, "and he's having fun doing it."

Trubey says three other North all-stars weaned on conservative basketball are having fun making the transition — Prep's Ted Parks, Sidney's Steve Cook and Wood River's Kent Luebs.

"Parks just couldn't wait," according to Trubey. "I told the team before we had our first practice what we planned to do. We didn't get around to the break until the third day. Parks kept asking me: 'Coach, when are we going to start running?'"

South coach Rod Felix of Seward never had that problem with his 12 all-stars. "I think everyone of our players played on a running ball club," h e says.

The irony is Felix has been ultraconservative as a coach in his 11 years at Seaward. He's changing for the all-star games.

"That's what the kids like to do and that's what the fans like to see," he says of a running game. "We chose the team with that idea in mind and we've really been happy with the results."

Felix has been so pleased he's even considering altering his own philosophy.

"After running pattern and the shuffle so long, it's tough," he says. "But this experience might even change me, I'm enjoying it as much as the kids are."

If the South enjoys an edge, both coaches concede it's quickness at guard. Their tempo might be the critical point in an other wise even matchup.

Stones Sets High Jump World Mark

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Walker of New Zealand, captured the first race in the Dream Mile Triple Wednesday night and Dwight Stones reaffirmed he was the world's greatest high jumper with a world record at the Philadelphia Bicentennial Meet of Champions.

Walker was clocked in 3 minutes, 56.2 seconds as he fought off brisk winds.

Stones soared 7 feet, 7¼ inches to smash his own world record, just four days after rain washed away his gold medal hopes in the Montreal Olympic Games.

Walker, gold medallist in the 1,500 at Montreal, was content to let Bryon Dyce of Jamaica set the pace for the first three laps and then when Paul Heinz-Wellman of West Germany took the lead on the final backstretch, Walker moved up to challenge.

On the final turn, Walker raced to the front as Wellman held off New Zealander Rod Dixon for second. Wellman ran 3:56.3 and Dixon was timed in 3:56.4.

The race was bulled as the first of three races to determine the world's greatest miler, but the same political dispute which rocked the Games rippled in Philadelphia when Tanzania's Filbert Bayi did not run.

The Walker-Bayi matchup has been put off numerous times since their last meeting in January 1974 for essentially the same reason — Tanzania's displeasure over New Zealand's sports ties with segregionist South Africa.

Walker, who has been the dominant middle distance runner for the past two years, had hoped to break his own world mark of 3:49.4, but the winds swirling on the backstretch in Franklin Field prevented that:

"If I was going to lose, today was the time," said Walker. "I've been on antibiotics for three days with the flu, but I had the commitment."

The race was also bulled as a comeback for Marty Liquori, the former Villanova miler who was injured and did not qualify for the U. S. team. Liquori was in contention with 300 meters to go, but he and West Germany's Thomas Wessinghage collided and fell with Liquori knocked out of the race. He was not injured.

The amazing Stones electrified the crowd of 13,772 with an incredible leap that topped the record he set in the NCAA championships here.

Heavily favored in the Olympics, Stones looked sharp in Montreal until a rainstorm created puddles on the jumping surface and prevented him from clearing 7 feet, 3¾ inches. He settled for the bronze, behind Jacek Wxzola of Poland and Canada's Greg Joy.

But, Wednesday night the 22-year-old showed his mastery by clearing 7-7¼ on his first jump. He took only nine jumps and had just one miss.

The elated Stones, wearing a warm-up shirt, that said, "Stones and Mickey Mouse are No. 1," took a victory lap after his jump but did not attempt a higher height.

The senior at Long Beach State jiggled the bar on his record attempt, which was measured at 2.32 meters, one centimeter over his previous mark. The new mark was one-quarter inch higher than the world mark Stone set at this same Franklin Field location exactly two months ago.

Moments later, the excited Stones told the crowd over the public address system that he had become concerned after placing third in the Olympics.

"I wondered if I ever would be able to shake down the depression I felt there," he said. "But the charisma that you people showed me tonight was just what I needed. I feel so many vibrations now that I can clear that height three or four more times tonight.

"I can't wait to come back to Philadelphia."

Earlier in the evening, a number of other Olympians withdrew from the meet at the last minute, including 200-meter gold medalist Don Quarrie of Jamaica and 400-meter hurdles gold medal winner Edwin Moses.

Steve Riddick, a member of the United State's winning 400-meter relay team, captured the 100-meter dash in 10.24 as Steve Williams pulled up with a slight injury but placed fourth.

Williams was attempting a comeback after the heavily favored sprinter failed to make the U. S. team.

Mike Boit of Kenya, who didn't compete in the Olympics because his nation pulled out in a political dispute, won the 800 in 1:46.1. And Francie Larrieu of Long Beach, Calif., defeated West Germany's Helen Wellman in the women's 800 in 2:04.2

This time, the 22-year-old Stones showed his complete mastery by clearing 7-0, 7-2, 7-3, 7-5 and then the world mark—all on his first try.

Big Eight Football Notes

Checking notes on the recent Big Eight Conference football luncheon in Kansas City:

Scott Burk, the quarterback who led Oklahoma State to a narrow 28-20 loss to Nebraska last season in Stillwater, may be switched to a defensive backfield position, according to Coach Jim Stanley.

Burk missed spring practice because he was a member of the Cowboys' baseball squad, but that's not the reason for the possibility of a switch. Biggest reason is that Charlie Weatherbie returns for his third season as OSU quarterback.

Weatherbie broke a collarbone in the third game last season and missed the next six games. Two-year letterman QB Jimmy Derrick has been slow in recovering from knee surgery. Listed No. 2 and 3 at the position going into preseason practice are junior Sylvester Berry, who has played very little, and Randy Stephenson, a freshman last season.

Oklahoma State, incidentally, has scrapped the wishbone in favor of the veer and Stanley says he might also use some slot-I formation plays. "The veer gives us the flexibility to throw the ball," Stanley said. "With the wishbone we had the inability to make people respect our passing game like they should."

Stanley noted that OSU went 7-4 last season, with the four losses all to teams ranked in the top 20 nationally at the time — Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado. The offensive pass interference call against the Cowboys which gave Nebraska possession of the ball on its own 20 still rankles Stanley. "One call kept us from winning the game," he said.

Colorado coach Bill Mallory commented on last year's 63-21 embarrassment against the Huskers: "At the half while we were walking to the dressing room I told one of my coaches we had made about every mistake there is in football. We just played lousy. We had no excuses. You can't make mistakes like that against a good football team."

The Iowa State Quarterback?

Iowa State coach Earl Bruce has not set a date for making the decision on who will be the Cyclones' No. 1 quarterback, but he sounded like it might be Wayne Stanley, who was held out last season.

"When you redshirt a quarterback and he comes back for his fifth year he seems to take on maturity and leadership qualities that tend to move the team rather well," Bruce said.

While Stanley will be in his fifth year, Buddy Hardeman will be in his fourth, but only a junior in eligibility. Hardeman, who is noted for his running ability, has been granted an extra year of eligibility under the injury-hardship rule.

Stanley is rated a good passer and he will have fine targets in senior Luther Blue and sophomore Ray Hardee.

Bruce said the offensive line is a definite concern of his, especially in the depth department. "Some depth is going to have to come from incoming freshmen," he said.

Missouri, which was picked to finish fourth in the Big Eight preseason poll of writers, could surprise everyone. "We have a proven quarterback (Steve Pisarkiewicz) and an outstanding tailback (Curtis Brown), plus depth in the backfield," Coach Al Onofrio said.

Ohio State Distraught

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State University Athletic Director J. Edward Weaver said Wednesday accusations in the Michigan State University student-operated newspaper that Buckeye coach Woody Hayes paid money and made other financial inducements in recruiting "represent the worst kind of character assassination."

The State News in a copyrighted story Wednesday quoted one Big Ten football player as saying he was given a $50 bill by Hayes in January, 1974, along with a promise his family and friends would be able to attend Rose Bowl games

"The most recent allegations which were reported to have been printed in the Michigan State University student newspaper represent the worst kind of character assassination," Weaver said in a statement.

Two days earlier, the student paper printed a story saying it had learned from unidentified sources Ohio State football boosters paid cash to transport prospective student athletes to Columbus for recruiting visits.

Branched Oak Swamp

Have you seen Branched Oak Lake this summer? Or should that be Branched Oak Swamp?

The concern by many fishermen, campers and swimmers at Branched Oak this year has been the seven-year-old lake's severe weed and algae growth problem. It just keeps getting worse

For the second year in a row, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission has had to close swimming beaches during early or mid-summer periods for removal of weed growth around beaches. It seems swimmers don't appreciate the aquatic plants clinging to their legs.

Fishermen are finding fewer places in the lake's shallow spots to cast a bait without choking up in weeds. And some of the fish are finding the hot weather algae die-offs to be choking their breathing with lack of oxygen

Boaters are having lots of fun coming out of the lake's boat launch areas, with few exceptions, fighting weeds in seven- to 10-foot water all the way through the launching bays.

Reaching The Young

Reaching young people has become an important role for conservation of and information on our natural surroundings. The National Wildlife Federation and the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission have two such programs in existence.

The National Wildlife Federation (NWF), through Ranger Rick, the kids' expert on outdoor living, recently came out with a list of six essential camping rules for those who want to "be friends of nature."

In easy to understand language:

- Do not distrub trees, flowers, animals or rocks.
- Be as clean as a cat. Go to the bathroom away from camp and away from water. Scoop a hole and cover it with dirt afterward.
- Talk quietly so you don't wake up other campers.
- Scoop out soil and make your campfire in the hole. Drown your campfire until cool to the touch. Then drown it some more and cover the ashes with the soil you dug up.
- Take all your trash out with you.
- Leave your campsite looking better than you found it.

Ranger Rick has some good thoughts but the digging or scooping of holes for campfires and potty facilities scars the land. We recommend Ranger Rick recommend using existing facilities if available, or take along an aluminum grill (lightweight and compact) for campfires in the wilderness.

While Ranger Rick is reaching youngsters on the national level for the NWF, the state's kids have found a new friend in the NEBRASKAland Magazine's "Mr. Whiskers."

Mr. Whiskers is a fuzzy little cartoon character with a message for school-age" kids. According to magazine editor Lowell Johnson, the monthly series " will focus on man and his associations with the natural world, and is intended to give readers a broader background of the problems and lifestyles of many native plants and animals and their relationship to man and each other."

New Mahoney Course Liked

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

With all the compliments Parks and Recreation director Don Smith had from players on the opening day of the new Mahoney Park golf course, it took a drive toward the city to really make Smith's day.

"When I left the course and drove West on Adams Street," Smith said. "Just before I got to 70th, I saw two kids riding their bicycles towards Mahoney with golf clubs strapped on their backs

"On a hot, windy day like that," he said. "I was just real pleased to see the kids of Northeast Lincoln taking that kind of interest in a new golf course."

Following brief dedication ceremonies with Lt. Gov. Gerry Whelan, Mayor Helen Boosalis and various other parties involved in the effort, a group consisting of Whelan, Park Board member Clancey Woolman, Lincoln Municipal Golf Association president Jack Fogerty and pro Tim Nelson christened the first tee with their shots.

Whelan hit the first ball, right down the middle. Following his effort, Mayor Boosalis did the honors as his caddy for about the first 100 yards.

But the real story was in the acceptance of the new course by the public.

"We've had real good reactions from the people," Nelson said. "Everbyody realizes that it's going to take some time before the fairways and roughs are perfect, but I think they all were pretty happy with the greens."

Several of those who could remember back to the opening of Holmes Park called Mahoney the better of the two on opening day.

Pioneers Park pro Dave Oliphant, recalled Holmes opening since he worked there before moving to Lamar, Colorado.

"This course is in so much better shape it's unbelievable," Oliphant said. "It's a lot better than I ever expected it to be at this stage."

Smith said the condition was partially due to the fact that Holmes wasn't given as good a start before opening.

"There are improvements needed, but I think the course has been brought along well by Al (Culver, the superintendent) and his crew," Smith said. "It wasn't good to me. But that's because I'm not that good a golfer."

The opening was the first time Smith had been on a course this year.

"The reactions of everybody who talked to me were very favorable," Smith said. "I think from the standpoint of it being a new course, I'm happy."

Bob Schuchart, pro at Holmes Park, also agreed with the general assessment.

"I think the fairways were remarkable, for this time," Schuchart said. "And the greens were super, too."

The opening was attended by an estimated 150 persons with guests from as far away as Denver. Craig Waugh, a top amateur golfer traveled from Atlantic, Iowa, just for the chance to play on the new course.

McCormick Has No Regrets For Sacrificing Football

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Keith McCormick won't have to pay tuition at Notre Dame, but four years ago he gave up football so he could come up with the [illegible] tuition to attend Omaha's Creighton Prep.

McCormick, a tackle on the North Shrine Bowl team scheduled to battle the South in Saturday's 18th annual charity football game at Memorial Stadium, doesn't regret his decision to bypass freshman football.

"Looking back on it now, it may have gotten me a little behind in football," he said, "but I like the satisfaction of having paid my own way."

McCormick believes his father would have come through financially if he hadn't. "But I felt if I worked for it myself, I wouldn't take it for granted," he said. "I appreciate it a lot more."

While Prep's freshman football team practiced four years ago, McCormick was laying sod every night after school until late October.

As a sophomore, he went out for football and started on the reserve team. Diligent work with weights then boosted him into the varsity starting lineup his junior and senior seasons.

Notre Dame won a recruiting tug-of-war with Nebraska for the 6-5, 220-pound McCormick. Former Nebraska coach George Kelley recruited him for the Irish, but his older brother may have had more influence with the decision.

"Marty will be a junior in business at Notre Dame," McCormick pointed out. "He loves it there. I know I will, too. I've dreamed about playing for Notre Dame all my life."

McCormick lived in Kearney until fourth grade before moving to Omaha's parochial school system.

"When we'd play football in the backyard, everybody always wanted to be Nebraska," he said. "I always wanted to be Notre Dame. My dad has been a big Notre Dame fan. We'd watch the replays on television every Sunday morning."

Although McCormick insists it was a difficult decision declining Nebraska's scholarship offer, he knew deep down where he would go.

The seeds were planted four years ago when Nebraska obliterated the Irish in the Orange Bowl.

"I was pulling for Notre Dame," McCormick admitted. "There was no dislike for Nebraska, just respect. People at Notre Dame still talk about that Nebraska game. They say they learned more in that game than they have in any in a long time."

Nebraska recruiters almost swayed him to Lincoln, according to McCormick. When the Cornhuskers didn't get the job done, "they were great. They're the best recruiters in the world. They deal with integrity. I guess that's why they're so good."

If being a Notre Dame recruit doesn't make McCormick conspicuous enough in the North camp at Fremont, his haircut does.

McCormick reported bald. "It started off as a dare from a buddy," he said. "My girlfriend cut it off."

North coaches are convinced they'll see McCormick in Notre Dame's starting lineup someday soon.

"He's going to be one of those 6-7, 280-pounders you see on television," predicted North head coach Bob Starr.

North assistant Tom Jaworski, McCormick's coach at Prep, said "He's a good kid, a very intelligent young man with a lot of life. He gets along with people, always hustles and always pushes himself. He's also always leaned to Notre Dame."

Tipoff — 8 p.m., Mid-Plains College, North Platte.

By RANDY YORK

North Platte — Guard Chris Salerno may have the longest shooting range in the North all-star basketball camp.

But, North coach Ken Trubey says, facetiously, Salerno also "has the biggest bit in his mouth and the strongest arms hold him back."

Playing for Brother Mike Wilmot's highly disciplined Creighton Prep teams, Salerno probably felt like a handcuffed criminal the past three years.

Thursday night here at Mid-Plains Community College, that's all going to change. Salerno is trading in his conservatism.

He's been given the green light — freedom to shoot whenever he feels like it as the North meets the South in the first of two Nebraska Coaches Assn. all-star games. Game No. 2 is set for Friday night at Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium.

"Chris really likes the fact that we're a running ball club," Ord's Trubey says. "Of course, we've been impressed with him on both ends of the court. I don't think he realized his own firepower."

Salerno, who will attend Hutchinson (Kan.) Junior College, triggers the North's fast break. "He's really learned the little things of a fast break," Trubey says, "and he's having fun doing it."

Trubey says three other North all-stars weaned on conservative basketball are having fun making the transition — Prep's Ted Parks, Sidney's Steve Cook and Wood River's Kent Luebs.

"Parks just couldn't wait," according to Trubey. "I told the team before we had our first practice what we planned to do. We didn't get around to the break until the third day. Parks kept asking me: 'Coach, when are we going to start running?'"

South coach Rod Felix of Seward never had that problem with his 12 all-stars. "I think everyone of our players played on a running ball club," h e says.

The irony is Felix has been ultraconservative as a coach in his 11 years at Seaward. He's changing for the all-star games.

"That's what the kids like to do and that's what the fans like to see," he says of a running game. "We chose the team with that idea in mind and we've really been happy with the results."

Felix has been so pleased he's even considering altering his own philosophy.

"After running pattern and the shuffle so long, it's tough," he says. "But this experience might even change me, I'm enjoying it as much as the kids are."

If the South enjoys an edge, both coaches concede it's quickness at guard. Their tempo might be the critical point in an other wise even matchup.

Felix says Bob Dickey, Don Trotter, Chuck Schnoor, Randy Presler and Kelly Ficken "are all quick guards. I just hope the North doesn't find a way to take that quickness away from us."

Whelan hit the first ball, right down the middle. Following his effort, Mayor Boosalis did the honors as his caddy for about the first 100 yards.

But the real story was in the acceptance of the new course by the public.

"We've had real good reactions from the people," Nelson said. "Everbyody realizes that it's going to take some time before the fairways and roughs are perfect, but I think they all were pretty happy with the greens."

Several of those who could remember back to the opening of Holmes Park called Mahoney the better of the two on opening day.

Pioneers Park pro Dave Oliphant recalled Holmes opening since he worked there before moving to Lamar, Colorado.

"This course is in so much better shape it's unbelievable," Oliphant said. "It's a lot better than I ever expected it to be at this stage."

Smith said the condition was partially due to the fact that Holmes wasn't given as good a start before opening.

"There are improvements needed, but I think the course has been brought along well by Al (Culver, the superintendent) and his crew," Smith said. "It wasn't good to me. But that's because I'm not that good a golfer."

The opening was the first time Smith had been on a course this year.

"The reactions of everybody who talked to me were very favorable," Smith said. "I think from the standpoint of it being a new course, I'm happy."

Bob Schuchart, pro at Holmes Park, also agreed with the general assessment.

"I think the fairways were remarkable, for this time," Schuchart said. "And the greens were super, too."

The opening was attended by an estimated 150 persons with guests from as far away as Denver. Craig Waugh, a top amateur golfer traveled from Atlantic, Iowa, just for the chance to play on the new course.

McCormick Has No Regrets For Sacrificing Football

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Keith McCormick won't have to pay tuition at Notre Dame, but four years ago he gave up football so he could come up with the $880 tuition to attend Omaha's Creighton Prep.

McCormick, a tackle on the North Shrine Bowl team scheduled to battle the South in Saturday's 18th annual charity football game at Memorial Stadium, doesn't regret his decision to bypass freshman football.

"Looking back on it now, it may have gotten me a little behind in football," he said, "but I like the satisfaction of having paid my own way."

McCormick believes his father would have come through financially if he hadn't. "But I felt if I worked for it myself, I wouldn't take it for granted," he said. "I appreciate it a lot more."

While Prep's freshman football team practiced four years ago, McCormick was laying sod every night after school until late October.

As a sophomore, he went out for football and started on the reserve team. Diligent work with weights then boosted him into the varsity starting lineup his junior and senior seasons.

Notre Dame won a recruiting tug-of-war with Nebraska for the 6-5, 220-pound McCormick. Former Nebraska coach George Kelley recruited him for the Irish, but his older brother may have had more influence with the decision.

"Marty will be a junior in business at Notre Dame," McCormick pointed out. "He loves it there. I know I will, too. I've dreamed about playing for Notre Dame all my life."

McCormick lived in Kearney until fourth grade before moving to Omaha's parochial school system.

"When we'd play football in the backyard, everybody always wanted to be Nebraska," he said. "I always wanted to be Notre Dame. My dad has been a big Notre Dame fan. We'd watch the replays on television every Sunday morning."

Although McCormick insists it was a difficult decision declining Nebraska's scholarship offer, he knew deep down where he would go.

The seeds were planted four years ago when Nebraska obliterated the Irish in the Orange Bowl.

"I was pulling for Notre Dame," McCormick admitted. "There was no dislike for Nebraska, just respect. People at Notre Dame still talk about that Nebraska game. They say they learned more in that game than they have in any in a long time."

Nebraska recruiters almost swayed him to Lincoln, according to McCormick. When the Cornhuskers didn't get the job done, "they were great. They're the best recruiters in the world. They deal with integrity. I guess that's why they're so good."

If being a Notre Dame recruit doesn't make McCormick conspicuous enough in the North camp at Fremont, his haircut does.

McCormick reported bald. "It started off as a dare from a buddy," he said. "My girlfriend cut it off."

North coaches are convinced they'll see McCormick in Notre Dame's starting lineup someday soon.

"He's going to be one of those 6-7, 260-pounders you see on television," predicted North head coach Bob Starr.

North assistant Tom Jaworski, McCormick's coach at Prep, said: "He's a good kid, a very intelligent young man with a lot of life. He gets along with people, always hustles and always pushes himself. He's also always leaned to Notre Dame."

Kansas City Edges Twins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Buck Martinez singled and doubled, driving in two runs as the Kansas City Royals beat Minnesota 4-2 Wednesday night, widening the gap over the Twins in the American League West to 10½ games.

Tom Poquette, Amos Otis and George Brett stroked consecutive singles against Dave Goltz, 9-10, in the first inning and the Royals jumped out to a 3-0 lead when Martinez blooped a double to right field

The Twins scored a run in the fifth on a two-out double by Bob Randall and Lyman Bostock's single.

Goltz held the Royals hitless from the second inning to the sixth, when John Mayberry reached base on an error and eventually scored on Martinez' single Right-hander Al Fitzmorris got his 13th victory against seven defeats. Reliever Mark Littell was credited with his 11th save.

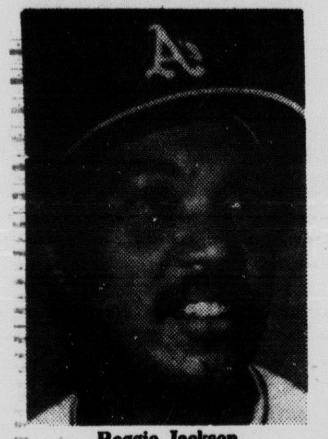
Morning Briefing



Reggie Jackson
Home Run Streak

Jackson AL Player Of Month

Baltimore Orioles' outfielder Reggie Jackson, who tied an American Leeague record by hitting a home run in six consecutive games, was named the AL player of the month for July.

Jackson hit nine home runs and drove in 25 runs in only 26 games during July while batting .310.

Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees was second in the voting. Previous winners this season have all been Detroit Tigers — Willie Horton in April, Ron LeFlore in May and Mark Fidrych in June.

Other Baseball

The San Francisco Giants recalled shortstop Johnnie Lemaster to take the roster spot vacated by the injury to catcher Marc Hill.

Football

The Washington Redskins acquired veteran cornerback Joe Lavender from the Philadelphia Eagles for defensive tackle Manny Sistrunk and draft picks in each of the next three years.

A University of Oklahoma assistant coach, Jim Helms, who might have been reassigned if the Sooners lost a lawsuit against the NCAA, is the new head coach at Cameron University.

Judith A. Thomas, 30, the wife of Baltimore Colts general manager Joe Thomas, was critically injured in a car accident in Maryland.

Offensive guard Woody Peoples of the San Francisco 49ers underwent surgery on his left knee and will be out for 10 weeks.

The Detroit Lions released six-year veteran wide receiver Jon Staggers to cut their roster to one player under the required 60.

The New Orleans Saints signed former New England wide receiver Elmo Wright and waived 12 other players including former Husker linebacker John Starkebaum, to get to the league limit.

Olympics

Another Romanian member of the Olympic squad defected to Canada, bringing to six the number of East European athletes who have elected not to go home at the end of the Games.

The chief physician of the Swiss Olympic team, Dr. Bernhard Segesser, charged that Mac Wilkins, winner of the discus, took extremely large amounts of anabolic steroids ("We would not even give them to elephants") during his pre-Olympic training.

Other Sports

Kansas City, deprived of its major league hockey franchise which was sold to Denver, negotiated a one-year minor league agreement with the St. Louis Blues. The Kansas City Blues will be a member of the Central Hockey League.

Chako Higuchi of Japan shot a six-under-par 68 to grab the lead of the $90,000 European Women's Open championship. Sandra Palmer topped the U.S. women with a 71. Defending champion Donna Caponi Young and tournament favorite Judy Rankin were tied at 74.

The NAIA placed Grambling University on one year probation for refusing to play in the NAIA basketball playoffs last season.

The German auto association which organized the race in which Niki Lauda was injured, said that first investigations indicated no third party was to blame in the crash that critically injured the Austrian Grand Prix driver.

Kansas City Edges Twins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Buck Martinez singled and doubled, driving in two runs as the Kansas City Royals beat Minnesota 4-2 Wednesday night, widening the gap over the Twins in the American League West to 10½ games.

Tom Poquette, Amos Otis and George Brett stroked consecutive singles against Dave Goltz, 9-10, in the first inning and the Royals jumped out to a 3-0 lead when Martinez blooped a double to right field.

The Twins scored a run in the fifth on a two-out double by Bob Randall and Lyman Bostock's single.

Goltz held the Royals hitless from the second inning to the sixth, when John Mayberry reached base on an error and eventually scored on Martinez' single.

Right-hander Al Fitzmorris got his 13th victory against seven defeats. Reliever Mark Littell was credited with his 11th save.

Two Permits Left For Deer

Only two Nebraska firearm deer units will offer permits when applications reopen on Aug. 2, and one of those areas has only a handful of licenses left.

The Loup East area had 37 permits remaining when the last round of drawings was completed, while the Sand Hills area still had 528. These permits will be up for grabs.

Legion Teams Take To Road

Sherman Field may be in its best shape in recent years, but Lincoln is without an area American Legion baseball tournament.

The Capital City's five Legion teams will split up this week and compete in state tournament qualifying competition at Columbus and Beatrice.

First National Bank and Gerry's, which tied for the Eastern division championship in the Cornhusker Legion League, join Beatrice and Judds Brothers in Area 4 competition, starting Thursday at Beatrice.

Town and Country and Lincoln Mutual Life join West division co-champion Grand Island and Columbus in Area 6 competition, also beginning Thursday at Columbus.

At stake for all teams in the double elimination tournaments is a berth in the State Class A Junior Legion Tournament, starting Aug. 13 at Ralston's Orval Smith Field.

Fresh from a 2-0 win last weekend over Grand Island for the league championship, First National coach Willie Weisbrook is determined his team can play with the state's best.

"If our kids go out on the field and play with enthusiasm," he said, "they can beat anyone. We're disappointed with the way the area tournaments are set up, but there's nothing anyone can do about it now.

"I hope all teams play up to potential," Weisbrook said. "We don't want any giveaways (walks) or freebies (errors). If you put forth your best effort and get beat, that's not so bad."

First National will take an 18-8 record into the tournament. It has beaten first-round foe Judds both times the two teams have met this season. It's also swept three games from Gerry's and split with Beatrice.

Going 5-0 against the other two Lincoln teams in the tournament is nice, Weisbrook said. "But that just makes them that much more dangerous in the tournament."

Weisbrook, seeking a repeat trip to the state tourney for First National, will start Doug Kaltenberger on the mound in Thursday's 5:30 p.m. game against Judds.

Kaltenberger shut down Grand Island bats last Saturday night in a brilliant one-hitter.

Beatrice and Gerry's play at 8 p.m. Thursday. Action will resume Saturday, matching losers at 5:30 and winners at 8 p.m.

Grand Island and Town and Country kick off Area 6 competition Thursday at 5:30 p.m. at Columbus. Lincoln Mutual and Hastings battle at 8.

Action resumes Friday at the same times.

Crouch Leads Misty To Win

Don Crouch led Misty Lounge with three RBI's on a single and a triple to a 12-6 win over Lincoln Transportation Wednesday night at Ballard Field during AAA fast pitch action.

Misty Lounge had just 10 hits and capitalized on four Lincoln Transportation errors.

In the nightcap, Falstaff beat Walke Tire, 7-4. Duane Eichorn scored the winning run in the sixth inning on a sacrifice fly by Kent Rinne. Jim Smith and Dan Cook both had two hits for Falstaff.

Governor's Cup Test Postponed

The Governor's Cup, one of Lincoln's biggest golf events each summer, has been postponed for two weeks.

Originally scheduled for this Saturday and Sunday, the Governor's Cup conflicted with Omaha's largest public tournament — the KMTV Open.

Cup directors said that many Omaha area players normally enter the Governor's meet, thus dictating a rescheduling.

The tournament will now start on Sat., Aug. 21 at Pioneers and conclude at Holmes on Sun., Aug. 22.

Felix Strives For Fairness

Kearney — An even match-up between the North and the South was the No. 1 priority as South all-star basketball coach Rod Felix drew up his team's lineups for the two all-star games Thursday and Friday.

"When we picked the North and South lineups, we wanted to make sure they were as even as possible," Felix said.

All-star games rules dictate that Felix and his North counterpart Ken Trubey must play six men of their 12-man squad in the first quarter of each game, and they must play the other six in the second quarter. After halftime, the coaches may play any combination of players.

Felix had planned to play Bob Dickey of Omaha Burke and Don Trotter of Omaha Bryan at guard in the same quarter, but decided to break up the tandem to match up better against the North.

The South mentor, who had earlier said that Dickey and Trotter make a difference playing together, said there was a good possibility of the two playing together in the second half.

Felix believes that neither team will have a real height advantage over the other. In the second quarter, the North will play two 6-3 guards against the South's 5-11 Dickey and 5-10 Chuck Schnoor of Minden. However, the South has the edge at the forward and center positions with 6-7 center Mark McVicker of Hastings and two forwards 6-6 or taller.

Legion Teams Take To Road

Sherman Field may be in its best shape in recent years, but Lincoln is without an area American Legion baseball tournament.

The Capital City's five Legion teams will split up this week and compete in state tournament qualifying competition at Columbus and Beatrice.

First National Bank and Gerry's, which tied for the Eastern division championship in the Cornhusker Legion League, join Beatrice and Judds Brothers in Area 4 competition, starting Thursday at Beatrice.

Town and Country and Lincoln Mutual Life join West division co-champion Grand Island and Columbus in Area 6 competition, also beginning Thursday at Columbus.

At stake for all teams in the double elimination tournaments is a berth in the State Class A Junior Legion Tournament, starting Aug. 13 at Ralston's Orval Smith Field.

Fresh from a 2-0 win last weekend over Grand Island for the league championship, First National coach Willie Weisbrook is determined his team can play with the state's best.

"If our kids go out on the field and play with enthusiasm," he said, "they can beat anyone. We're disappointed with the way the area tournaments are set up, but there's nothing anyone can do about it now.

"I hope all teams play up to potential," Weisbrook said. "We don't want any giveaways (walks) or freebies (errors). If you put forth your best effort and get beat, that's not so bad."

First National will take an 18-8 record into the tournament. It has beaten first round foe Judds both times the two teams have met this season. It's also swept three games from Gerry's and split with Beatrice.

Going 5-0 against the other two Lincoln teams in the tournament is nice, Weisbrook said. "But that just makes them that much more dangerous in the tournament."

Weisbrook, seeking a repeat trip to the state tourney for First National, will start Doug Kaltenberger on the mound in Thursday's 5:30 p.m. game against Judds.

Kaltenberger shut down Grand Island bats last Saturday night in a brilliant one-hitter.

Beatrice and Gerry's play at 8 p.m. Thursday. Action will resume Saturday, matching losers at 5:30 and winners at 8 p.m.

Grand Island and Town and Country kick off Area 6 competition Thursday at 5:30 p.m. at Columbus. Lincoln Mutual and Hastings battle at 8.

Action resumes Friday at the same times.

Crouch Leads Misty To Win

Don Crouch led Misty Lounge with three RBI's on a single and a triple to a 12-6 win over Lincoln Transportation Wednesday night at Ballard Field during AAA fast pitch action.

Misty Lounge had just 10 hits and capitalized on four Lincoln Transportation errors.

In the nightcap, Falstaff beat Walke Tire, 7-4. Duane Eichorn scored the winning run in the sixth inning on a sacrifice fly by Kent Rinne. Jim Smith and Dan Cook both had two hits for Falstaff.

Ramirez, Dibbs Advance

NORTH CONWAY, N. H. (AP) — Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Eddie Dibbs of Miami, the fourth and fifth seeds, advanced to the third round of an $10,000 international pro tennis tournament Wednesday.

Ramirez had to scramble to overcome Jairo Velasco of Columbia 6-7, 6-3, 6-3. Velasco, a Davis Cup player with a tenacious backcourt game, is tough to beat on the slow, red clay courts at the Mt. Cranmore Tennis Club.

Dibbs, showing no after-effects of the flu and tonsilitis which kept him bedridden for five days last week, breezed past Swedish Davis cupper Rolf Norberg 6-1, 6-2.

The tournament is co-sponsored by the Mt. Washington Valley Chamber of Commerce and Volvo of America Corp.

Top seed Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., who won his second-round match Tuesday, had a day off in singles but teamed with Arthur Ashe of Miami for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Norberg and Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., in a first-round doubles match.

Ashe and Conners, ranked first and second in the United States, are playing doubles together for only the second time.

Ramirez, Dibbs Advance

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Eddie Dibbs of Miami, the fourth and fifth seeds, advanced to the third round of an $10,000 international pro tennis tournament Wednesday.

Ramirez had to scramble to overcome Jairo Velasco of Columbia 6-7, 6-3, 6-3. Velasco, a Davis Cup player with a tenacious backcourt game, is tough to beat on the slow, red clay courts at the Mt. Cranmore Tennis Club.

Dibbs, showing no after-effects of the flu and tonsilitis which kept him bedridden for five days last week, breezed past Swedish Davis cupper Rolf Norberg 6-1, 6-2.

The tournament is co-sponsored by the Mt. Washington Valley Chamber of Commerce and Volvo of America Corp.

Top seed Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., who won his second-round match Tuesday, had a day off in singles but teamed with Arthur Ashe of Miami for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Norberg and Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., in a first-round doubles match.

Ashe and Conners, ranked first and second in the United States, are playing doubles together for only the second time.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
